'YOU KNOW, WHEN I WAS IN SCHOOL...': Minister of Education Sean Conway reminisced about the days when he played with plasticine during a chat with Grade 1 student Chad Pentney on a tour through Archie Stouffer's primary school on Friday. Chad was a bit bewildered by all the attention.

School tour a lesson on over-crowding for minister

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Although Sean Conway left without making any promises, board of education officials are giving him an A for effort after the education minister got a first-hand view of over-crowded schools in Haliburton County.

In a tour Friday organized by MPP John Eakins, Conway visited the Archie Stouffer Elementary school annex at the former IGA store, drove past Archie Stouffer, climbed down the fire escape at Victoria Street School and saw what happens when you put a college campus and kindergarten classes in the same small building.

"I can make no commitment today," Conway said at an informal gathering at the board office after the tour. "I don't want to be cavalier. I promised I'd come and look and listen and I did that."

"I can't offer a quick resolution today. There's no question some of the facilities will have to be examined. But my data base is now much more strong and I will be meeting with my officials and getting back to you in the not-too-distant future."

"Like General McArthur, I will return." Because he grew up in Barry's Bay, just north-east of the county, Conway says he understands the challenges facing rural school boards. "I'm sensitive to the distance factors" and seeing the accommodation problems himself "has been very useful."

Yet once more, Conway underlined his address by adding "I don't want to raise unrealistic expectations."

Schools in Minden and Haliburton are bursting at the seams.

Minden kindergarten and Grade 1 students are in the old IGA store—the lease expires next year—and Archie Stouffer Elementary School is still crowded.

Kindergarten classes in Haliburton are held at the Sir Sandford Fleming College Lakeview Campus, a building owned by the board of education but recently sold to the college. More students at Victoria Street School means more students enrolling at J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School. And with more Grade 8 students graduating from

"They can always find a few extra dollars if they really want to help us," board of education chairman Len Salvatori told the Echo. He was pleased with the tour.

At the gathering, there was a great deal of bonhomie—"Lennie and friends," Conway began his short speech. This rapport had been enhanced by a chance meeting Salvatori had with Conway a few weeks ago. Salvatori recognized Conway in the Sutton Place lobby in Toronto, and proceeded to lobby the politician for 45 minutes.

But until Conway was actually

'There's no question some of the facilities aren't ideal. I'll do everything I possibly can to work with the board to meet those needs.'

Archie Stouffer and Hodgson Elementary, the high school will be pressed for space.

The problems will only magnify when the primary schools have to start offering Junior Kindergarten.

At present, the education ministry funds 28 per cent of the local board's costs. The rest is raised through municipal taxes. The board has asked for capital funds to build more schools, but the ministry turned the request down.

"Haliburton is a very large rural county with considerable distances to travel," Conway said in a brief interview with the Echo.

"There's no question some of the facilities are not ideal. I'll do everything I possibly can to work with the board to meet those needs... The board's been very straight with me and I didn't come to make big promises. I want to be fair and responsive."

here to view the situation himself, Salvatori says "he had no idea of what we were talking about. Now he knows the situation and it's up to them whether they'll help us out."

"We know that John Eakins has influenced the fact that Sean is up here. He's really supportive," says trustee Wendy Ladurantaye, who adds the board has also "been working behind the scenes" to convince the ministry to approve building projects. (The board has not yet decided where, and what grade school, to build.)

The board also wants Conway's help with a technicality over the Lakeview building. Ministry policy says boards must wait 10 years to build new schools after selling old buildings. This is to prevent boards from "upgrading" their schools without need.

However, local trustees argue, the Dysart discusses draft of budget; 10% rise expected

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

A few changes will be made to Dysart et al's preliminary municipal budget, but Reeve Bill Davis is determined to keep the tax increase below 10 per cent.

"It's pretty hard to keep it at nine per cent," Davis admitted after fellow council members went over his budget with a fine-tooth comb Monday. "It's like trying to do a million dollars work with $500,000."

Councillor Murray Fearrey, the municipality's previous reeve, noted some omissions and errors in the draft budget. "There were a lot of things touched on that were left out," he said after the discussion.

Davis reminded Fearrey that the budget is only preliminary. Since this is his first term as reeve and his first shot at drafting the budget, Monday's discussion was aimed at correcting any mistakes. "We'll have to do some arrangements and fine-tuning," he said.

In discussing a first draft of the municipality's budget in public, Davis was trying a different approach in his new role as reeve. Whereas budget deliberations are normally held in closed meetings, Davis later told The Echo he'd like to see a more open council. However, Davis added he may have been wrong in opening the discussion.

Instructing each councillor to discuss with their committees any suggested revisions for the draft, Davis asked that council meet again next week to try and finalize the budget.

Council must still deal with pending levies from the county and the board of education.

But in drawing up the municipal budget, Councillor Fearrey pointed out that council can't pass the buck in accounting for tax increases. "We can't blame this thing on the provincial government. It's all right here on our laps."

Davis agreed. "It's time we cleaned up our own house, instead of blaming everything on the federal and provincial governments."

Meanwhile, there are a few setbacks council must face in drafting this year's budget, such as a decrease in tax arrears collected, and a $79,000 loss in commercial assessment after the folding of G. W. Martin's sawmill.

A few projects planned include restructuring of some sidewalks and building of wheelchair ramps in Haliburton Village, installation of new traffic lights at the intersection of Highland and Maple, and replacement of street lights to a more energy-efficient type (story on that elsewhere in this paper).

Also, Councillor Dorothy Baker suggested extra money be budgeted to replace the bridge at Head Lake Park, rather than just fix it as the draft indicated. "It should be rebuilt," said Baker. "It's much too steep going down. Someone will get hurt."

Snowdon might restrict hobby livestock numbers

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

To prevent angry neighbours from making a stink, Snowdon Township is attempting to limit livestock on small "hobby" farms.

A draft bylaw was drawn up to alleviate any problems with the housing of animals and handling of manure which may arise when hobby farms are run on small properties in residential areas. On Monday, council heard the public's reaction to the proposed bylaw which regulates the number of livestock allowed.

Loosely based on guidelines provided in the Agricultural Code of Practice, the bylaw sets out the number of animal units permitted on each acre of land on properties which are between five and 50 acres. The following constitute one animal unit: one horse, or one horse plus foal; one bull; one steer; five rabbits (excluding pets); five poultry; four goats; one cow, or one cow plus calf; four sheep; five hogs; or five mink.

The bylaw also provides setbacks for structures used to house animals, manure storage or feedlots. These must be set 300 feet from any pre-existing adjacent building, 150 feet from the road, and 100 feet from any lot line.

Most of the ratepayers present found no problem with council trying to regulate livestock, but took exception to rules restricting the number of smaller animals.

"Five rabbits are kept in a cage,"

ASBESTOS: Area schools must be tested for this hazardous material

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Testing for asbestos in area schools will soon be underway by the Haliburton County Board of Education.

"There might be (an asbestos problem in the schools), or there might not be," says board chairman Len Salvatori. Surveys for asbestos were previously done in the early '80s, but a recent initiative by the Ministry of Labour is demanding more testing.

The ministry requires that all boards have a plan for testing in place by May 31, so the local board expects to choose a planning consultant by the end of this month, says Business Administrator Jim Bradley.

There are three stages the board must go through to fulfill the ministry's requirements for asbestos testing.

Once a plan is developed, inspection is necessary to identify whether there are any serious problems in the schools. Problem areas would then be mapped out.

Next, the condition of any asbestos must be determined to identify what must be covered up. Rather than remove asbestos, which would only aggravate fibres and create the dust to float in the air, the Ministry of Labour recommends that asbestos be encapsulated.

Then, each school's care staff must be trained to deal with repairs of equipment where asbestos is found. If asbestos is being used to insulate a heating pipe, staff must know what to do if that pipe needs to be replaced.

Regular follow-up is then necessary to ensure there are no cracks in the encapsulated asbestos material.

Bradley says nothing serious was found when testing was originally performed in the early '80s. "We went through a similar survey. Back then there were no problems found with exposed asbestos. And where we had some asbestos, it was properly encapsulated."

At that time, inspectors looked at items such as ceiling tiles and insulation. However, Bradley says that survey was not as detailed as the one currently demanded by the ministry.

Asbestos is a soft, fibrous mineral used as a fire-protector and for heat insulation purposes, and is more of a problem in bigger schools with large boiler installations. The inhalation of asbestos particles can cause a lung disease called asbestosis.

The board has budgeted $50,000 to look for asbestos and handle any possible problems. However, Bradley says probably on a portion of this money will be used.

"If they do come up with a serious problem, where asbestos can't be encapsulated and has to be removed, then it would be very expensive," he says. "Fortunately, I don't think we have that problem."

Lakeview school was really closed down as a public school in 1972, when Hodgson Elementary was opened. Sir Sandford has been renting the building from the board and it was only last year when Victoria Street School could hold no more children that the board rented back some of those classes. Therefore, Lakeview cannot be considered a school, they say.

"We could make a quick fix," says Conway, "but we have to operate with fairness across the province." Rules cannot be broken to serve one board, while another may suffer.

"I've never seen a rule you couldn't shift," says Director of Education, Stuart Baker.

HAVE helping needy villagers

by FRED ELSON
H.A.V.E. Project Officer

The Help a Village Effort Committee, HAVE, greets you this Springtime and is pleased to report a number of positive and interesting aspects of our development work with needy villagers.

1. Well-drilling continues and in cases where problems have occurred, as they must from time to time, we are pushing for solutions. Gerry Feltham is with Dr. Dondena in Nowrangpur, India, monitoring the work we sponsor there.

2. The Director of the Rural Community Health Centre in Nowrangpur is Dr. Dondena and he has made our work there possible. He has recently been honoured for his work to meet the crucial educational needs of tribal people. He has been awarded the J. Roby Kidd Award by the International Council for Adult Education, and $2,000 Canadian goes to him to support the work. We are glad for him and for HAVE's share in achieving quality development work.

3. The RUCHC staff and local people are holding in Nowrangpur, on April 27, their Second Annual Walk for Water. Gerry Feltham will be there to walk with them. This is their own effort patterned on our Walk for Water which will be held as usual in June.

4. Work at the Base Centre in Nowrangpur continues to expand and recently Gerry Feltham was able to present the graduating certificates to the first group of women who completed their course in tailoring. They are now carrying the work into the villages.

We think we should share this positive report with you so that you know what good development work has been made possible through your support of the HAVE Committee.

Bylaw regulates livestock

so how could that cause problems? That makes no sense," said Cathy Fisher. "A rabbit doesn't live off the land. Most rabbits and chickens are contained."

John Francis agreed. "There's more wild ones on a property than that."

Keith Schrader said the bylaw is an unnecessary regulation. "Why not leave it as it has been until it becomes a problem?"

"Because when it becomes a problem, it's too late," said Reeve George Simmons. If such a bylaw is in place, council won't have to deal with forcing someone to tear down a barn too close to their neighbours sometime in the future. "It protects the public," said Simmons.

Clerk Ernie Hills explained the bylaw was drawn up because there has been a marked increase in the number of severance applications in the township.

"We're looking at the future," added Deputy-reeve Dwain Wruth. "We'll have a lot of rural-residential lots. If someone moves a farm in between two homes, there's bound to be complaints about the stink..."

"We want to protect you, but we also want to protect your next-door neighbour," he said.

Wruth later added the regulation is for part-time farmers. "A hobby farm is a luxury. You don't make a living off a hobby farm."

One man suggested council control how manure is maintained, rather than the number of livestock.

Wruth said this is hard to regulate. When the bylaw was being drawn up, "I wanted to add that you have to dispose of manure within one year," but this would be too difficult to enforce.

Council agreed to postpone passing the bylaw until its May 14 meeting, and will consider loosening up the limits on smaller livestock such as rabbits and chickens.

Snowdon gives Lyddiatt further extension to take away derelict cars on property

by SUSAN GROBER

Staff Reporter

An extension has been granted on the clean-up of Gord Lyddiatt's South Lake property by Snowdon Township council.

The owner of Lyddiatt's Towing has been holding a number of vehicles that haven't been claimed after being towed away. This practice angers members the South Lake Association of Cottagers and Residents (SLACAR), which has urged council to get the property cleaned up.

As a result, council passed a property standards bylaw in February pertaining to derelict vehicles.

But Lyddiatt believes the bylaw prevents him from providing the towing service. "I'm not running a wrecking yard here. It's a good, clean business," he told The Echo last month.

Lyddiatt presented this concern to council. After a closed meeting in March with his representative, planning consultant Brad Bradmore, the township came to a draft agreement, deciding to grant a one-month extension on enforcement of the bylaw.

At Monday's meeting, council agreed to extend the extension on a month-to-month basis, on the condition that council is satisfied efforts are taken toward eventual clean-up of the property.

Council was told Bradmore has contacted the cottagers' association, and hopes to meet with them to discuss the matter.

And the township's bylaw enforcement officer says there has been some effort to clean up the property.

During its April 23 planning committee meeting, Bradmore will present a report to council. And on the May 14 council meeting, the draft agreement between Lyddiatt and the township will be reviewed.

The property standards bylaw defines derelict vehicles as any vehicles which are inoperative, unlicensed, have missing parts, and are not properly enclosed or protected.

A procedural statement passed along with the bylaw stipulates that complaints must be submitted to council in writing. Action is taken at council's discretion, with the most weight given to complaints from neighbours within 400 feet of the subject property.

Schools need information on young offenders: BOE

by SUSAN GROBER

Staff Reporter

The Haliburton County Board of Education supports a resolution that school officials be given more information about young offenders who have returned to school.

"One of the greatest concerns is a young offender could be placed in a school without anyone knowing his background," said Education Director Stuart Baker at last month's board meeting.

"The school wouldn't be aware of the special needs related to (the student's) criminal activity."

Local trustees considered a letter which included a resolution passed in early March by the Lakehead Board of Education. It questions the wisdom of releasing from secure custody and placing into a normal school setting young offenders convicted of violent crimes and/or serious drug related offences.

A young offender may have a background of violence, and school administration would have no way of knowing.

The resolution calls for effective communication between legal officials and education leaders regarding the Young Offenders Act and the Education Act, to ensure the appropriate placement of the young offenders when they return to the school setting.

Board relies on cottagers

Conway hasn't accepted the premise that property shouldn't be the basis of a person's ability to pay taxes. "Property attracts assessment and tax," he says, and will likely to continue to do so.

"If we didn't have the cottagers' taxes, we'd have to close schools," says board chairman Len Salvatori.

Approximately 60 per cent of property tax goes to the board of education, which angers the cottagers partly because this is a service they can't use. As well, they feel that personal wealth should be the basis of taxation.

Dysart lights are set to shine

by SUSAN GROBER

Staff Reporter

New street lights will be shining in the townships of Dysart, Guilford and Harburn.

Dysart et al's 290 street lights which are 400 watt mercury vapour will be replaced. Ontario Hydro is recommending the use of more energy-efficient high-pressure sodium lights which provide the same illumination, with better colour retention, at less than a quarter of the cost.

Reporting to council on Monday, Roads Superintendent Jim Taylor estimated the cost of operation at $30-$32,000. He said the municipality is getting quotes on the cost of replacing and installing the lights from private contractors in the area.

A contractor charges at least a third less than Ontario Hydro, Taylor explained. However, there might be a problem in finding a contractor who is certified by Ontario Hydro to work within 10 feet of their primary line. "Only a few here have this certification," he said.

Only the actual lights and fixtures must be replaced. The existing arms can still be used, Taylor explained.

He added that the cost of maintaining the new lights is much cheaper for Ontario Hydro than the present fixtures, and that the new heads have a better longevity.

Reeve Bill Davis is enthusiastic about the project. "We need a firm price so we can get ahead with the installation," he said. Davis also instructed Taylor to explore whether Ontario Hydro offers financing for the work.

Councillor Murray Fearrey questioned why $65,000 is in the preliminary budget for installation of the lights. Taylor explained that figure is based on the original estimate for the work.

Auto dealer admits to $1,600 mistake

by SUSAN GROBER

Staff Reporter

A revised bill for a Dysart et al truck sent outside the municipality for repairs is $1,600 cheaper now that errors have been corrected.

Previously, Winslow-Gerolamy Motors in Peterborough charged $11,212.99 for repairs to a truck owned by the municipality. Since the original estimate was much lower than this price, Roads Superintendent Jim Taylor questioned the bill, which the company cut to $9,586.51.

"That's quite a way to do business," Councillor Murray Fearrey said about the automotive dealer. It was Fearrey who first approached Taylor about the bill, which he learned about during a finance committee meeting.

Councillor Brian Watts said the revised bill still seems rather steep. "A figure given to me was $6,500. It shouldn't have been as high as $9,500."

A representative of Winslow-Gerolamy told The Echo the municipality was over-charged for both parts and labour. When the bill was drawn up, a pricing code error meant the parts were charged at a trade rather than retail price. And there was mistake in the estimate for labour charges.

Repairs included an engine tune-up, disassembling of the engine, replacement of the throttle cable, as well as removal and repair of the radiator.

When strangers meet...

Overseas penpals finally meet face-to-face

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

WHEN IS A STRANGER not a stranger? When the first time two strangers meet they already know all about each other's family, favourite subjects at school, views about religion, aspirations and prowess at baseball (or lack thereof.)

Andrew Way of Essonville and Angelika Wiele (pronounced Veelah) of Koln, West Germany met face to face for the first time last week. Yet they had been the best of friends long before that.

Two years ago, the teenagers began corresponding with each other. The first letters were cautious—"Hello, my name is Angelika, I am 16 years old", "Hello, my name is Andrew, I am 16 years old"—attempts to establish a rapport.

"I don't usually write a lot of letters and I thought if I'd have a penpal I'd write more," Andrew says as the friends watch the snow fall out the window of the Ways' home near Wilberforce. "I was curious, too."

"I'm interested in different countries, people, cultures and also languages," adds Angelika, who stumbles for the occasional word, but is very adept at this foreign language. (English is mandatory after Grade 5 in Germany and Angelika also studies French.)

"Introducing" them was the International Youth Service, which matches penpals in dozens of countries. Each had other penpals, but for some reason, friendship never took root and interest waned.

However, once Andrew and Angelika got past the first awkward letters, they discovered that this person on the other side of the Atlantic was not a bad person to "talk" to.

"Through letters, you can tell your penpal more about yourself," says Andrew, who agrees that he'd tell Angelika things in his letters that he wouldn't tell his own friends in Canada. A penpal isn't judgemental, he says.

"There's a kind of confidence there, a special confidence, that you do not share with your other friends who you see every day," Angelika adds.

The two have used their letters as a way of putting their own thoughts and beliefs into words. As well as talking about their favourite sports—Angelika still can't grasp what baseball is all about—they probed a little deeper into what it meant to be a teenager.

When Andrew sent Angelika a picture of his all-terrain vehicle, he said he'd give her a ride some time. Angelika decided to take him up on his offer. She did it in a round-about way, however. First she said she might be coming to Canada to visit family friends in Saskatchewan. Without discussing it with his parents, Ruby and Paul, Andrew said "Well, you can stay here if you want to... And here she is"

Plans were made for Angelika to visit during her three-week school break. (She saved up the money by working in a boutique.)

The Ways, who by now were equally excited, thought Angelika was arriving on Saturday, March 31. On Friday, they received a telephone call from friends in Montreal saying Angelika had just flown in. With the time differences, what was Saturday in Germany was Friday in Canada.

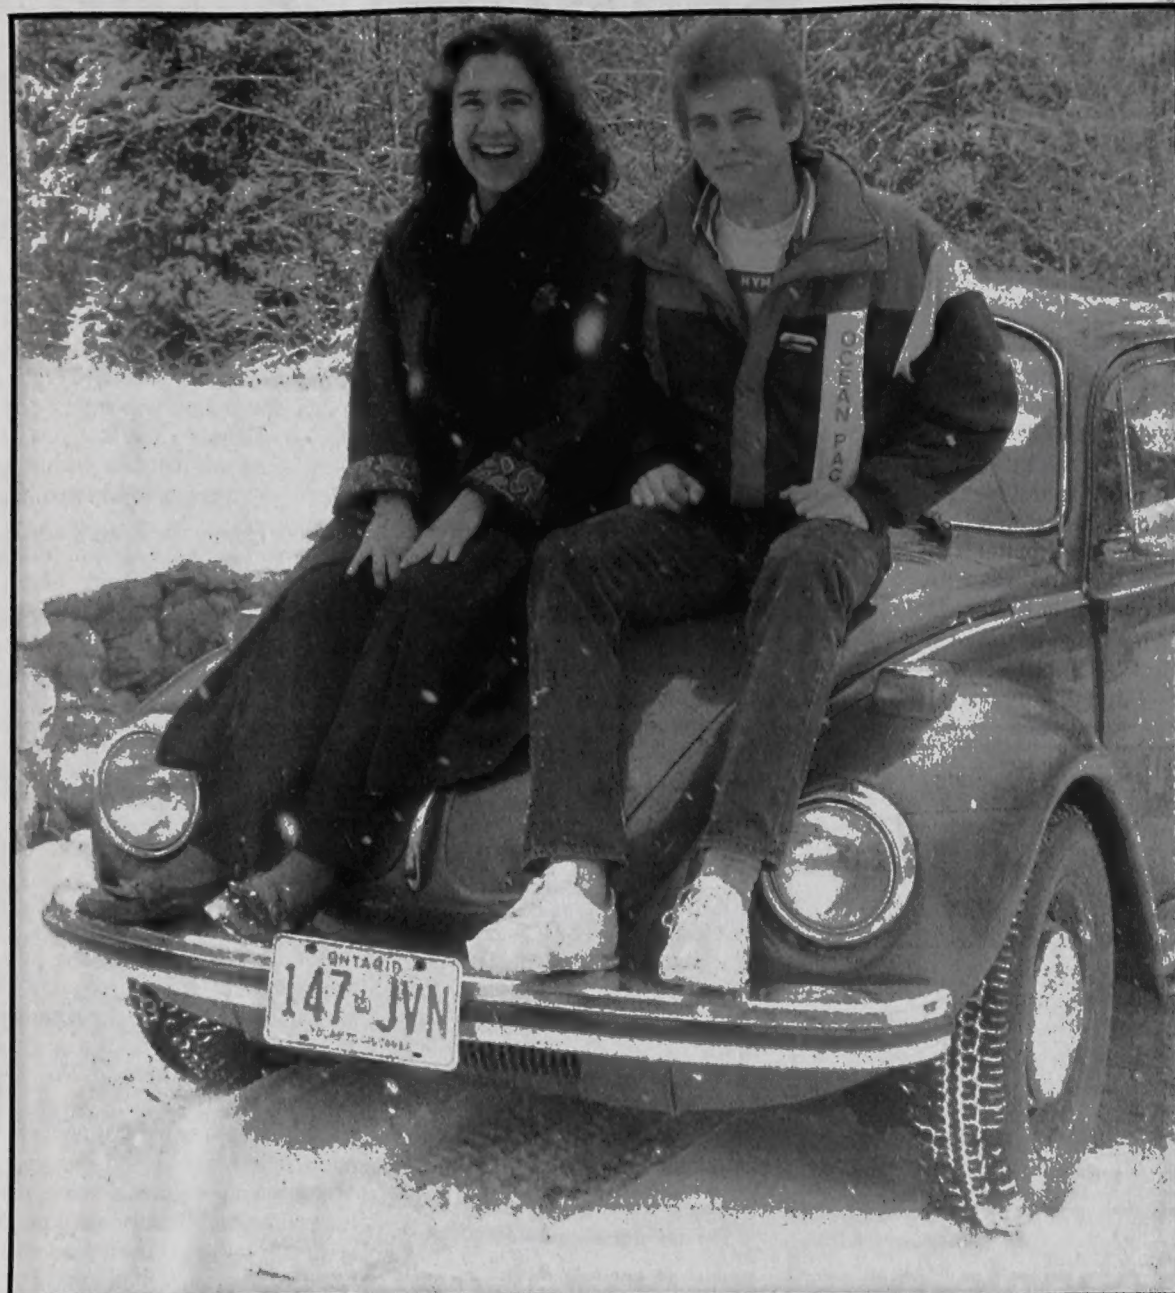

A difficult beginning

Angelika's first hours in Canada were not idyllic. She sat at the Mirabel airport from 10:30 at night until 6:30 the next morning, when she caught a bus to Peterborough. Then Andrew went to the wrong bus depot, so he was half an hour late picking her up.

"Above all I was tired," Angelika says of her first impressions. "I didn't see anything around me. I just thought 'Bed, bed, where's a bed?'"

Tired as she was, during the ride to Essonville, Angelika managed to have an animated conversation with her penpal who, surprisingly, looked a lot like his photographs.

"I don't think teens have difficulty getting to know each other," observes Mrs. Way. "When they arrived here, they were laughing as if they had known each other for years."

Angelika Wiele was thrilled with Andrew Way's Beetle

Angelika and Andrew do a lot of talking by laughing. Whenever they can't find the right words, they laugh. Even if they can find the right words, they laugh.

"I deduced from his letters he is sympathetic. He writes so funny, I have to laugh. I'm not disappointed (since meeting him.) Now I laugh more than in the letters."

But in this interview, Angelika sticks to using words to describe life in Germany.

She lives in an apartment in Hurth, a city 10 km from Koln (or Cologne in the Anglicized version.) Her mother is a dentist's receptionist and her younger brother, Henry, is also a student.

At high school—of which she has one more year—Angelika studies the usual assortment of courses but one subject seems out of sorts with what's happening in Canada: Up until Grade 10, it is mandatory to study religion.

"If you don't want to take it any more you fill out a form and you have to get the permission of the principal, your teacher and parents," she says, surprised that religion isn't talk here. "In my course we talked about Buddhism, Hinduism, some things out of the Bible and now we're reading Steppenwolf by Herman Hesse. It's about a man, and inside he has two souls. One is human and the other is wolf and these two fight with each other."

"It's very important to see other religions, too, to see what is better and understand other people's."

Learning other languages

Languages are also stressed in Germany, which is neighbour to so many countries. Most teachers are educated in England, so when students learn how to speak English, it's often with an Oxford accent—I shan't go because I caan't daance.

"I told Andrew if he taught me slang my teacher would deliver me out of the room," Angelika laughs.

Students find it difficult to get accepted into university because the demand is so great. Angelika is not sure this is a positive reflection on young German society.

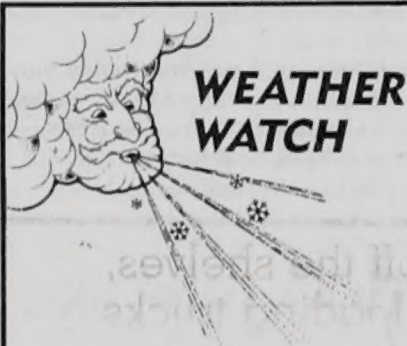

"The new status in Germany is money and a high position, to live more comfortably," she says in disapproval. "I think happiness is the most important and I don't know if you can get happy" just by having lots of money. There's certainly a lot more stress now that students must compete for limited university openings.

"Perhaps it's harder for a teenager. They want to go to university to earn more money. They're very ambitious."

With everyone finding prestige in a university degree, employers in the trade industries can't find enough people willing to do the physical, and less well-paid, jobs.

"There are some employers who need workers who can repair cars or repair houses," Angelika says. Not finding them in West Germany, their eyes Take heart. It should at last be spring-like this week.

"Wednesday through Saturday there should be a warming trend and temperatures will be near normal, which is about 10 degrees in the daytime and -2 at night," says Haliburton weather watcher Jim Elstone. "However, Sunday should see a slight cooling again."

"And we're not going to see a lot of blue sky I'm afraid. There will be precipitation ending on Wednesday and then possibly rain Friday night into Saturday. Things aren't going to happen in a hurry this week."

Last week gave us a mixed bag of everything, Mr. Elstone says. "We picked up just about an inch of rain on the Monday and Tuesday, then 11 centimetres of snow Tuesday and Wednesday, and then 3 cm on the Thursday and it was gone by noonhour."

Temperatures were below normal. For most of last week, daytime highs were running about 3 degrees and on Saturday morning it dropped to -12. The most spring-like day was Sunday, with a high of 6.5.

The cold spot in the world at -42 was Canada's Shepherd Bay, while the temperature reached 46 in Senegal. South-western France is very dry and they're bothered with many forest fires "and they don't have much forest to burn."

France would appreciate some of the rain that's been belting down in Bangladesh, even though monsoon season has yet to arrive.

In history, on April 9, 1947, the "Tri-State Tornado" tore up a 356-kilometre path across Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas, killing 169 people and injuring 980.

Another interesting note on how the weather has changed history occurred on Friday 13, 1858. Strong Lake Ontario winds blew away the narrow isthmus jutting out from Toronto and Toronto Island was created.

Syrup producers wait...and wait

'It fluctuates so much. The season's been berserk'

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

SPRING'S NOT over yet. Or so local maple syrup producers hope.

Blame it on the funny spring weather, or the stress of last summer's funny dryspell, or the definitely not-so-funny ravages of the Forest Tent Caterpillar, but the relatively slow run of maple sap is no laughing matter.

"Maybe tomorrow," says Louise Berry, who owns Iron Kettle Maple Products and has been saying "maybe tomorrow" for quite a few yesterdays. "We'll still get lots. Hopefully."

Judging by last year's record books, Mrs. Berry may be right. The best run on her 6,000 tapped maples last year was April 14, just four days shy of her last day of tapping. That means she's looking forward to Easter as a weekend of work.

No matter what the run is like, though, she still won't be as busy as she was last year. Because some of her trees need a rest, in part thanks to the caterpillars, she's only tapped 1,200 trees this spring. Most are line-fed to her modern sugar shack (complete with reverse osmosis concentrator) and with such a slow run, she can handle the evaporator by herself. The walk through her bush to empty her 300 buckets boosts her spirit.

At maximum, two trees can produce one gallon of syrup—it takes 35 gallons of sap to make a gallon of syrup—but Mrs. Berry says the ratio this year will be approximately five-to-one.

"One day you boil and then you wait five days," she says of this season's oddities.

Not worried yet

"I'm not worried because the season's not over," says Godfrey Tyler of Waverly Brook Farms on the Old Donald Road near Haliburton. "I'm sitting at two-thirds of my crop... and last year I had a big run at the end of the season."

Since this is only his second year in business, Mr. Tyler says he doesn't have much to compare this year to. But with many years experience in farming, he says success depends on how well you manage your resources.

"If you've been looking after your bush, you'll be alright," he says. As well, with his trees on a pipeline, "I can pick up a lot of little runs without labour costs."

The beginning or the end?

"We're not sure if it hasn't started or if it's over yet," says Dianne Dawson, who with her husband Tom, owns Wintergreen, a commercial maple syrup operation near Gelert. "It hasn't been great."

"It fluctuates so much," her husband adds. "The season's been more berserk than usual. Everyone was in a panic when the temperature went way up above normal (during the March Break) and all the snow melted. That was the worst scenario."

But the worst scenario didn't pan out because of the amount of frost still in the ground. Last December's record-breaking cold temperature and bare ground pushed the frost deep into the soil. So the ground is taking a lot longer to warm up.

"It's a delayed season," says Mr. Dawson, who's been doing the bush work on the 500 tapped trees which are gravity fed to their shack/retail outlet/pancake barn. "Winter's hanging on for longer than you'd expect."

Because Wintergreen focuses on marketing—their operation includes extensive tours of the grounds and facilities, a multitude of ways to buy syrup, and an eating area—the Dawsons won't be as severely affected if it continues to be a slow run.

An expensive commodity

Last year turned for the better at the last minute, and there was still syrup on many stores' shelves. Dwain Wruth, whose family's been tapping with horses for decades, says part of the problem was producers were over-pricing themselves.

The Maple Syrup Producers Association recommended the price of $45 for four litres, but Wruth says in some places outside Haliburton County, it was $55. That's too much, he says.

"What's changing (the market) dramatically," counters Mr. Dawson, "is it used to be a local North American market." Now Europeans and Japanese have discovered Canadian maple syrup and are trying to buy it in huge amounts. "There are people who are moving in and saying it's a bargain."

Besides that, says Mrs. Berry, syrup is expensive to produce because of increased labour, equipment and fuel costs.

It's partly because Mr. Wruth couldn't get enough helpers that he decided not to tap this year. His father, Murray, wasn't feeling well, and because the Wruths use buckets and horses to collect the sap in them—it made for a very picturesque scene but was very time-consuming—he requires a lot of help.

"I didn't tap last year because of the caterpillars but (the bush) is dying off just as quick as if I had tapped," Mr. Wruth says. There have been longer dry spells in the past, so the last two dry summers can't be the cause, he says.

"There's just a whole lot of stresses at the same time—dry weather, acid rain, and caterpillars," he says.

Mr. Wruth predicts they'll be a good run of sap yet. "It's going to hit for about three days" as the weather warms up but the nights remain frosty.

His fellow producers certainly hope so.

SPRING'S SWEET ELIXIR: While maple syrup producers worry about the weather, consumers worry whether there'll be enough syrup on the shelves in one of Spring's favourite rituals. The price of syrup may be high, but producers say it's expensive to make and foreign demand drives the prices up. (Photo by Martha Perkins)

A good show

Sometimes, when life seems more complicated than you can possibly bear, when time quickens and responsibilities grow heavier, it is liberating to be reminded in small but arresting ways, of why village life keeps your spirit alive and your senses heightened. It could be as simple as fingers lifted from the steering wheel of the vehicle you meet — the subtle gesture of greeting you acknowledge in kind that says we know each other, and we belong. It could be the brief conversation as you buy your morning coffee, or the trip to the post office that is a fixed point of your day. Or it could be the simple events that bring people together, and that allow us, for a brief moment, to share the same space for the same purpose, whether for fun or relaxation, or to recognize achievement.

There are a hundred, a thousand ways to experience those small but vital moments that distinguish community life, but few can match the magic of a figure skating carnival. There, for an all too brief hour, the essence of small town life is distilled into glittering lights and costumes, laughter and applause. No one brings expectations the event cannot fulfill. The skaters do their best, and that is enough. The coaches have worked as hard as the children, and the parents have stood by, watching, encouraging and supporting. When the stands fill up and the lights brighten on a local skating carnival, as they do every year in Haliburton, Minden and Wilberforce, the warmth you feel is a manifestation of love.

The simpler, less frantic, less competitive days of small town life may be gone forever, but the liberating moments that give us perspective and make community life worthwhile, endure.

Failing service

Every Canadian knows that Canada Post is something of a national disgrace — expensive, slow, indifferent, dragged down by militant unions who demand more for doing less. But until recently, we could cling to the belief that the local post office stood apart from these contemptible trends. It was a place where people still seemed to matter, where the idea of service still had meaning. There were rules, to be sure, handed down from management in Ottawa, but they could be bent a little when people's needs came first.

Today, as Canada Post relentlessly pursues its vision of profit, the idea of service is rapidly, and it would seem, irrevocably, disappearing. Until a few months ago, mail arrived in Haliburton early in the morning and it was often sorted and in the boxes by 10:30 a.m. Now the mail doesn't arrive in town before 10, and if it's in the boxes before noon it's an exceptional day. This newspaper is addressed and in the Haliburton post office before 10 a.m. each Wednesday, yet you can pick your mail up at 1 p.m. and not find The Echo in your box. That's because the rules say first class mail sorting has priority. An hour or two may not matter much when all you're waiting for is a post card, but mail service is vital to many local businesses, who depend on it both to get their invoices out and to get back the account payments without which they'd quickly be out of business.

Now, in yet another insult to the community, and in yet another blow to the concept of 'service' in Canada's shoddy postal service, management somewhere along the chain of command has decreed that employees of the Haliburton Post Office can no longer sort mail on Saturday. And they wanted the lock box lobby to be closed by two p.m., although that edict, apparently, has not yet been carried out. In effect, this means that on a long weekend, the community will go at least three and more likely four days without mail service. Who cares? Certainly not Canada Post management, and certainly not the union leaders, who think the idea of a fair day's work for a fair day's pay belongs to a less enlightened era.

Not so many years ago, when the mail arrived in Haliburton by train, post office workers would sort it mail as late as midnight, and hand it over the counter to waiting customers. Service was important, and mail made a difference in people's lives. Mail still matters, particularly to small businesses, but you'd never know it from the attitude of Canada Post. What's next? An end to the local post office as we have known it.

The break-up begins... at last

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

OUR READERS WRITE...

Editor's note: The following letter was sent to Frank Lussing, Chief Executive Officer for St. Joseph's General Hospital in Peterborough, which owns the Haliburton Hospital.

Dear Mr. Lussing:

We read in April 4th's Echo that the St. Joseph's Hospital Board of Governors is deliberating on how best to fund the outstanding portion of the architect's fee for the ill-fated chronic care unit in Haliburton.

We are dismayed to learn that the Board might propose to pay this debt with dollars raised by our county in its successful fund-raising campaign. We would like you to immediately convey to the Board that this is a totally unacceptable use of the money that we have personally donated.

Furthermore, we believe we speak for many when we say that the use of this fund for any purpose other than originally intended would be repugnant and wholly against the spirit in which the donations were solicited.

Should the expansion be doomed and never be built, then the only logical and honorable means of dispersing the fun is to return every penny, with interest, to those who donated.

The Ontario Government has lied to us and cheated us in this matter. We certainly don't expect to be double-crossed by St. Joseph's Hospital too!

Yours sincerely,

Robert Heyes, M.D.; Karl Hartwick, M.D.; Dean Stokes, M.D.; Norman Bottum, M.D.; Christina Moga, M.D.; H.E. Good, M.D.; and C.J. Abrahamse, M.D.; Haliburton

Spring cleaning is needed at park

To the Editor:

Our park needs tender loving care.

We chose Head Lake Park to enjoy an early spring play and picnic with some friends when I became concerned with the amount of litter the melting snow was revealing. Dangerous and ugly to people, animals and water fowl, I felt a positive action was needed.

The municipal workers should plant trees, water grass, maintain play areas and picnic tables and empty waste cans but litter needs to be everyone's job.

It thought it would be wonderful for our community if many, many people joined together and really made a difference.

Good Friday, April 13, from 10 til 12 I invite all to do a spring clean-up of our earth. Come to Head Lake Park with a litter bag or do a section of road near your home or other public land.

The more people involved will also help eliminate the problem.

Hope to see you there.

Marilyn Mighton,
Stanhope

P.S. Please be careful with broken glass.

French services are a waste to taxpayers

To the Editor:

Just a short letter to thank the municipalities of Lutterworth, Snowdon and any other municipality in Haliburton County which has passed English as their official language. Also, thanks to the County of Haliburton for doing same.

I see the Haliburton County Board of Education is waking up to what the Peterson government has in mind for Ontario. Mr. Peterson has stated that a French language program must be set up for even one French student if his parents demand same. What a ridiculous waste of the taxpayer's money.

Mr. Peterson says Bill 8 will not cost the municipalities anything. But if Haliburton County had to set up a French language program would that not cost the municipalities and the taxpayer a heck of a lot of money?

Dave Switzer, Frankford.

FEIR PLAY

CREIGHTON FEIR

CURRY MOTORS LIMITED has been serving the motorist for the past 65 years and for 45 of them, Joe Iles has played a big part in the success of this business operation. On Friday, April 5th he walked out the front door of Curry Motors to begin his life in retirement. It was the end of an era. His career in the motor industry started when he took a job of p umping gas and doing odd jobs at Curry's Shell Station which was located on the present site of the Jasco Drug Mart. He moved over to the brand new garage later which was constructed at its present location on the main intersection of Haliburton at the corner of Highland Street and Maple Avenue. As the years went by he took another step up the ladder to take the position as head car salesman. His knowledge of cars and trucks made him a valuable asset to the company and through the years he had the opportunity to meet a great many people and make a host of friends. Joe is well known through the auto industry and this has been a big plus when it comes to dealing with other dealers. He worked his way up from the bottom to the top and when he retired he was co-owner of Curry Motors Limited. No matter how busy he was with his position at the garage he always had time to be of service to the community. He was a forty-year member of the Haliburton Fire Department, past president of the Rotary Club of Haliburton, a member of the local Progressive Conservative Association, member of the Haliburton Curling Club, the only living member of the original Glen Dart Tournament committee, and was always ready to lend a helping hand to minor hockey or any other worthy cause in the community. He is a member of the Haliburton United Church and during his retirement he expects to be busy playing golf and taking part in his two favourite hobbies of hunting and fishing. One thing sometimes is overlooked when we look back on Joe's career and defence for the Haliburton Huskies during their glory years. He logged a lot of ice time and was one of the best defensemen to ever play for the team. There is an old saying that goes something like this. "You take a person as you find them" and although he might have been on the gruff side on the outside, I always found him to have a heart of gold on the inside. I also found that when you needed a true friend you could always count on Joe. So to Joe and Jean, may you have good health and happiness during the years of retirement.

Adrian and Marie Whitfield of Haliburton have returned home following a holiday in Venezuela.

A belated congratulations note to the Haliburton PeeWees who won the All-Ontario PeeWee Championship when they defeated Teeswater in four straight games in the final round. I've seen a lot of hockey games but I don't believe I have ever seen a team with as much determination or the will to win as shown by this young band of hockey players. Some of the midget and junior teams could take a lesson from the players on this team when it comes to passing the puck around. They were something to watch. At different times in the playoffs the opposition teams might have been bigger but our boys kept right on digging and usually came out on the winning end. Some great hockey players in the future are going to come out of this team.

The Loon's Nest, Haliburton's newest restaurant, opened its doors last week following considerable renovation. The 40-seat restaurant located in the lower level of the Halco Plaza is featuring a varied menu. The new eating establishment is owned and operated by three local women.

This week Can-ar Coach Service, which operates a bus line from Haliburton to Toronto, announced that their new agent and bus stop will be in front of the Loon's Nest Restaurant. Tickets can be purchased here and parcel pick-up will be at the same location.

Some local hockey fans have made the suggestion that when the Glen Dart Memorial Trophy is played for next year that the committee consider the idea of honouring one of the men each year who have given freely of their time to keep the tournament going during the past 38 years. It sounds like a wonderful idea.

According to Hockey News: the fans call him Broadway Bernie; the general manager calls him the key to the New York Rangers' playoff hopes. "The reason we acquired him was because we felt we needed a big, offensive, centre," said Rangers' GM Neil Smith. "So far he has done everything we've expected." If the Rangers hope to win the Stanley Cup Bernie will have to score and score often.

If you like to play cards your opportunity is coming up for an evening of entertainment when the Haliburton Hospital Auxiliary hold its Spring Bridge & Euchre at the Legion Auditorium on Thursday, May 10th at 8:00 p.m. Proceeds for hospital equipment.

POINTS OF VIEW

Solving world problems with sex

AS OTHERS SEE IT

BOB GIULIANO

YOU WON'T BELIEVE THIS, but it's true, every word of it. I can document it all by some seventy-five witnesses and through newspaper articles as well. So what follows is not a smutty story, but the whole truth, nothing but the truth, so help me!

I was a guest lecturer at St. Paul's Cathedral a few weeks ago. I was to summarize the Biblical view of the human city. The myth of the city is my favourite subject area. I was absolutely eloquent and articulate, unwinding from Cain being the first builder of cities because he rejected Jahweh's punishment for his having killed his brother Abel, to the promise of the new city not made by human hands, in the Revelation to John.

Sweat beading my bald brow, I ended the lecture and asked for questions. Several hands went up. Good questions were raised by thoughtful city dwellers. Then the hand of an older woman, blond hair, bright smile, a pensioner. She said that the problem in the city was that the churches were hypocrites about sex. That is, the churches do not accept sex as a necessary part of human life. If we in the church would recognize the human need for sexual expression there would not be so much violence in our cities. People need, she said, to have sex at least three times a week or the energies build up, travel up the spine to the brain and distort thinking, causing violence.

What this had to do with my scholarly lecture seemed puzzling to me, so I pressed her to say more, foolish man that I am. Already folks were choking back laughter and tears were flowing in mirth.

To make a long discussion readable, let me summarize: The lady was convinced that sufficient sexual release would pacify our city streets. She was so convinced of this that she had opened an "academy" where these matters could be studied and experimented with. "I am a scientist," she said, "but I have been charged with keeping a bawdy house. All I was doing was releasing the potential violence of the city." Now, she reported, she could no longer campaign as a candidate for mayor because she had a criminal record. Her last campaign won her 2,100 votes. Her platform was freer sexual expression for all, (she publicly accused the present mayor of dysfunction because he wasn't expressive often enough), and she promised to build a landing pad for UFOs at the north end of the city, the first in Canada.

Would you vote for her?

I was a little taken aback. After all, I had spent months preparing my scholarly presentation and this woman and swept it all out of everyone's mind. Nevertheless, over the howling laughter and sheer fun everyone was caught in, my questioner persisted: "You can tell those who are not violent and who are having sex often enough," she said. "For example, your forehead is pink." There was a stunned silence, waiting for the meaning of my pink face. She smiled knowingly and said, "People who don't get enough sex have white foreheads!" Everyone started covering their heads and looking at their neighbour's brow. She gave a scientific explanation for this phenomenon and then sat back contentedly in her chair.

The evening dissolved into laughter, coffee and cake. The lady and I had a short visit while she asked me to see her to her car. She was going to open an academy, the "Agnes Academy", soon and she wondered if I would teach at her academy the "profound things we had talked about tonight." I agreed to teach any subject she chose in her academy and helped the crippled scientist into her car.

Waving goodbye she said, "This is my church."

Well, the cathedral, her church, is a great place where it welcomes the Agneses of this world as well as the scholars, and other "scientists" who make up the human city. The church, especially the cathedral, casts its roof over the whole city and thereby welcomes all God's children of the city into the church's membership and lets them speak.

However, I have this finely honed lecture on "The Biblical Theology of the City-Myth", if anyone would like to hear it...

Some things are better left alone

DOWN OUR ROAD

SHARON LYNCH

RAINY DAYS ARE LIKE poor relations come to visit. They can only be tolerated so long and then everyone wants them to leave. This particular weekend the gang thought that if they left the city for the cottage, they might get away from the rain. They were wrong. It was raining when they arrived early Friday, rained all night and continued on Saturday.

Sometimes big, fat drops plopped onto the sodden pine needles beside the deck. These would then ease off and the rain became a heavy mist. At first they would get their hopes up that the weather was improving and any minute the sun would break through the clouds. But no, the drops would again grow large and sloppy, pummeling the tired old ice in the lake and making the short walk to the outhouse an ordeal of rubber boots, jacket, rain poncho and umbrella. And even then a person ended up with wet pant legs. The wind always waited until they walked around the edge of the cottage, then surprised them with a gust that blew all protection aside. A minute was all that was needed to soak unshielded clothing.

Boredom can lead to all kinds of trouble. People do funny things when they're trying to fill time; things that they normally might never consider. Weather, if it's bad, can confine you indoors against your will and let's face it, there are only so many things you can do in a small cottage with not even a radio. Reading is wonderful and so is poker. But the eyes get tired after hours of concentration on tiny markings, be they on pages or cards.

So by nine o'clock Saturday night, everyone was getting a little weird. A cousin had driven over from Twelve Mile Lake, hoping to find some stimulation. But once they had caught up on all the family gossip and played a marathon Monopoly game, they were looking for something more.

They were on their second or third glass of wine, it was never quite clear, when someone suggested they get out the Ouija board. They hadn't used it since they were kids. Why not, they thought; it should be good for a hoot. The rain was coming down in buckets again. No lights shone from across the lake. It felt as though they were stranded in a world turned to liquid, floating on their own little island, wet, bedraggled and alone.

They got the box down from the back bedroom

Making peace with the earth

NORTHERN LIGHTS

VIRGINIA MUENZEL

I TOOK A QUIET STROLL Sunday morning around the field and down to the lake with my mini-herd of cats in tow chasing my stick, running on ahead, pouncing on each other, and stopping now and then to sniff out mice or moles or other little beasts that lurk beneath the frozen earth or last year's dried up grass.

It was a quiet time, stressless, soul-rewarding. The earth, all heaved and frozen, bore careful steps. The three cold nights had caused a new skim of ice where no current ran through the bay of the lake. The only voices came from ducks, and crows, and red-winged blackbirds, robins, and a bird song I don't know. All celebrating sunshine, spring and busy planning for new life.

Spring is such a bursting forth of life. Seeds planted, (animal or vegetable), nourished mainly by the sun, the water, and the soil, and what grows in it. These three simplest of elements sustain all life. The sun's rays must be filtered through the ozone. The water safe to drink. The soil, rich in natural nutrients. The entire chain of life is in the space around us. And every living thing within this space depends on every other living thing. They're all important, have purpose, fill a need.

If we remove a link, we break the chain. And if we break the chain too many times, then life won't work at all. It's up to each of us to keep our space pure. Not sterile, free of dirt and bugs and useful bacteria. But free of chemicals that kills the germs, or bugs and in so doing, weaken or kill mice and cats, coons, small birds, large birds, foul the soil that then feeds and fouls the grain that feeds the larger animals (like us). And when it rains, the showers leech through the earth and all those chemicals seep down to the water table and the lakes, where mice, bugs, coons and other animals (like us) quench their thirst.

Earthday is coming! Let us celebrate by making peace with nature. Hold a clump of earth in your hands, smell its fragrance, and promise to be true to it. To feed it only natural things, so that it can nurture bugs and worms and green plants that feed other bugs, and toads, and birds and larger animals (like us). Cup some water in your hands and taste it with your tongue tip. Vow to keep it drinkable and free of oil and pesticides and phosphates for amoebas, tadpoles, fish and ducks and other, larger animals (like us).

Face upwards toward the sun and close your eyes and feel its comfort, energy and warmth. And tell it that you'll write and work and yell like hell to keep the ozone-piercing chemicals at bay, to keep the global warming trend from making life unbearable for bugs and fish and birds, and mice, and other larger animals (like us).

Earthday is coming! And we can't evade the issues anymore. The bugs, and fish, and birds, and toads, and elephants are all depending on another larger, upright animal. It's up to us.

Pic of the Past

It was around the year 1927 when this picture was taken. It shows Steve Walling in Walling's Dairy Milk Wagon, which is being drawn by horse Nepper. Milk and cream and other dairy products were delivered door to door in Haliburton from this wagon. Nipper was rather a unique wagon horse. He didn't like to move in a hurry, but he sure knew the route. Wallings Dairy was operated by Steve and his brother Lester. Our thanks to Steve Walling of Goose Lake Road, RR.3, Woodville, Ontario.

Missing the mysteries of myths

THROUGH THE PERISCOPE

MARTHA PERKINS

MYTHS ARE MEANT to be shattered, I suppose. Unencumbered by the fancies of imagination, myths break way and in their stead, truth reveals itself.

Too bad truth has to be so cold sometimes.

Two Christmases ago, I created a myth for myself when I was walking on the frozen lake. A loud boom startled me. Then there was another boom, which, now that my ears were attuned, sounded more like a giant whoosh, splash. It was as if a whale had got caught underneath the ice and was banging its tail against the surface.

Grade 11 physics came back to me. It was something about the unusual characteristics of water which makes it change densities at four degrees Celsius. That's why ice cubes, which as a solid are supposed to be heavier, float in water; and why ice forms at the top of a lake, not the bottom.

So on this December day, I surmised the water must be "flipping". The cold air on the bottom was trading places with the warm air on top, hence the booming. Nature seemed almighty.

Not so, I was told by someone at the Frost Centre when I phoned to confirm my theories on Monday. That constant boom, boom which reverberating through these spring nights is nothing but cracking and shifting ice. Blocks of ice bang into each other, and boom. Because water is such a good conductor of sound—imagine ice cubes in a glass on a hot summer's day—the resulting noise is magnified. Lake water does flip, but you'd never be able to hear it.

I still like my theory about the flipping better.

...As I've written in a previous column, in my youth Spring meant marbles. Marbles rolling across the grit-covered sidewalks the first day you didn't have to wear boots to school. (Since older children wear shoes to school all year-round now, young readers might not understand some of my icons of Spring.)

Apparently marbles meant as much to Margaret Atwood when she was growing up. In her book, Cat's Eye, her heroine even keeps her marbles in the coveted purple Crown Royal bag which identified true champions of the game. (We didn't know what Crown Royal was.)

What made marbles so special was how unattainable they were. At every moment, you knew exactly how many you owned, and losing one to an opponent was traumatic.

So imagine my surprise when I saw the display of marbles at the store the other day. Some of them had been modernized with space-aged flecks or new-age crystal clearness, but they were definitely marbles.

However, it was the price which really grabbed my attention: $1.19 for about 10 of them. The shock was how inexpensive they were. When I was growing up on 25 cents a week allowance—no, young readers, I didn't have to walk two miles to school, too—you could no more think of affording marbles than you could a new bicycle. That's why winning them on the playground was so important.

Today, $1.19 seems such a trifling amount. Are they cheaper because they've lost the craft of putting the cat's eye in the middle? Or were they always so inexpensive to adults? The world is changing more than we know.

But on second thought, when I think of marbles' power as a harbinger of Spring and youth, I'm glad their magic was never weakened by my parents giving me enough money to buy them.

Plumbing the depths of humour

I GUESS THE QUESTION of the week is this: Can you write a column about the serious business of toilets without someone referring to it as 'toilet humour'?

Some twenty-five years or so ago, Jack Parr was removed from the air for a reference to a 'water closet' while talking about a trip to England. How times have changed on TV!

While we were away, there were a number of references in the media to an incident in Valparaiso, Iowa. It seems an 18-year-old lad named Todd Donahoo claimed an overzealous clerk locked him in the washroom at the Burger King there, which was marked 'for paying customers only.'

According to the victim, "She was yelling 'get back in here and buy something!'" A spokesperson for the restaurant chain said it was an honest mistake...

Down Florida way, there is a severe water shortage. They'll still give you a glass of water when you sit down in a restaurant, but they are seriously discussing legislation that will regulate the amount of water used to flush any new toilets being installed in the state.

Water management engineers have estimated that, of the 108 million gallons of fresh, treated, drinkable water currently being flushed down toilets across the state, 75 million gallons could be saved if modern units were installed.

When they tell you that 35 to 40 per cent of all household water used goes down the john, you can see why they want to legislate the use of ultralow volume (ULV) fixtures.

These ULV models are required by law in the state of Massachusetts, and in California's Los Angeles County. In Colorado, the Denver water board began the year by offering an $80 rebate to anyone who rips out an older model and installs one of these watersavers.

It seems that toilets installed before 1980, which used from five to seven gallons a flush, have been replaced by units during that decade that only took 3.5 gallons. These ULV models now get it down to 1.6 gallons.

Curiously, since they would seem to be the ones to benefit most, toilet manufacturers lobbied the U.S. Congress vigorously last year to kill a bill that would require all new toilets being installed meet the ULV standard. They apparently feel householders would blame them if the units weren't quite as efficient as those in the past.

Government regulations are also showing up in the area known as 'potty parity' as well. As anyone who travels or goes to public events knows, there are always clusters of men waiting outside the washrooms for wives who are still lined up to get in. We noticed this problem once again on our trip south last January, when we pulled into roadsides along Interstate 75. I've never been to the SkyDome, but I have seen the same type of backup at Maple Leaf Gardens over the years...

The most recently-passed bill was in Iowa, where there now must be twice as many toilet fixtures for women in every new building. This is the same ratio as was legislated in Virginia last November.

Oddly enough, a ratio of 3-2 was made the law in California recently, while New York settled for an equal 50-50 split — which I always thought was the problem in the first place...

Virginia came to the 2-1 ratio through — would you believe — a research project. Sandra Rawls, who earned a doctorate by doing the study, found that men had lots of time to fill out her questionnaires while they lounged around waiting for their wives.

The wives, on the other hand, were less cooperative because they felt they had kept their

SPORTS

CELEBRATION TIME: Members of the Haliburton Tri-County PeeWees took a joyous ride on a fire truck on Sunday to celebrate their victory over Sunderland in the regional 'B' championship series. The win capped an outstanding season for the local boys, who won 41 of their 49 games.

Bantams come close to the title but lose by a margin to Manvers

Haliburton's Sport Stop Tri County Bantams came within two periods of winning the overall title in their final series against Manvers, but the breaks did not go their way in the final game on Friday night, despite home ice advantage.

Minor Tykes fought hard for a victory

The Haliburton Minor Tykes played Minden for their final game of the season. The teams played three 15-minute periods—instead of the usual 10 minute period—but still came out the winners. The action was end to end for the first period. Nicholas Mitchel, assisted by Curtis Danilko and Justin Walker, opened up the scoring for Minden at the end of the first. Caleb Loughheed, assisted by Ben Carpenter and Adam Tomlinson, garnered another goal for Minden. Halfway through the second period, the Haliburton Tykes took over the action when Ryan Kirkpatrick, assisted by Jeremy Mieske and Andrew Sachs, scored.

One minute later, Ryan Kirkpatrick scored again.
Please turn to page 16

The series came down to the seventh and deciding game at the Dysart arena, with both teams going end to end in a bid to gain the series-winning advantage.

Haliburton looked sharp in the first period but the Manvers netminder was equal to the challenge, and kept the local boys off the board. The period ended in a scoreless tie.

In the second period play remained even until the half way mark, when Manvers took charge, scoring three unanswered goals as Haliburton's defensive play broke down.

The third period provided no relief from Manvers' attack. Haliburton penetrated the visitors' defence with strong rushes and good passing, but they failed to get the puck past the visiting netminder. With 5:30 remaining, Manvers notched yet another goal, and with 1:36 on the clock, the visitors continued their dominance, scoring the game's fifth and final goal.

Post game celebrations were marred by a scuffle involving several players from both teams, but cooler heads soon prevailed, and coaches exchanged congratulations and apologies for the unsportsmanlike conclusion to what had been an exciting series for both teams.

Stunning win makes champs of the Tri-County PeeWees

It has been an outstanding year for the Tri-County PeeWee hockey players from Haliburton. The OMHA team won all-Ontario double "D" and the Tri-County boys took the regional "B" championship. It didn't come easily for either team, and the tri-county game on Saturday in Sunderland was no exception.

Both teams came out skating hard, but it was Haliburton's Johnny Hewson who scored first, assisted by Jamie McMahon and Colin Morrison. Collin put one in a short time later, assisted by Billy Koz and Mike Hartwick. The score remained 2-0 going into the third period. Then Haliburton got a penalty and Sunderland started to pour it on. But Jamie Cowen shut them down with some outstanding goaltending and Tim Stouffer was able to clear the zone.

As Sunderland was starting to regroup for another assault on the Haliburton netminder, Billy Koz stole the puck off of a Sunderland defenseman and laid a perfect pass out to Colin "The Sniper" Morrison who rifled home what proved to be the winning goal of the game.

Sunderland fought harder and were able to get two goals in the late stages of the game. John Calder scored their first from Scott Thomas and Randy Benstead. Then Matt Kean got one from Andy Shewen and John Calder.

Then came the moment of truth: 22 seconds to go in the game and a face off in Haliburton's end. Sunderland won the draw, but Billy Koz stole the puck, and with as many as three Sunderland players on him he lugged the puck until time ran out. Final score was Haliburton 3, Sunderland 2. What a game! What a score!

This team played a total of 49 games this season (including tournaments). Their record was 41 wins, four losses and four ties. They scored 192 goals and let in only 58. Jamie Cowen got nine shutouts (a goal against the average of 1.18 per game). They won three tournaments and the regional "B" championship.

The day after the game the boys were treated to a ride on the firetruck in town and then supper at the Harvest Restaurant sponsored by Bruce Cowen.

It was during this meal that the players got up and thanked the coaches and parents for an unforgettable season. "Well boys," the coaches replied, "You earned it."

LOOKING FOR A WIN: Haliburton's Tri-County Bantams took their championship series against Manvers to a seventh and deciding game on Friday at the Dysart arena, only to lose 5-0. The series was a good one, and the local boys had no reason to hang their heads, despite the outcome of game seven.

Brilliant Haliburton skaters mark 50 years of winter fun

The Haliburton Figure Skating Club staged a birthday party on Sunday, and the whole community was invited. With glittering costumes, dazzling ensemble and solo skating, and a constellation of coloured lights, the event was a fitting way to celebrate a half century of winter fun for three generations of local residents.

While this year's carnival was an opportunity for club skaters to display their skating prowess for family and friends, it was also an occasion to pay tribute to the tradition of community involvement that has kept the Haliburton Figure Skating strong and growing through 50 Highlands winters.

With that tradition in mind, carnival organizers invited skaters from the past to join the present generation of young performers, and the gesture gave this year's carnival a sense of shared community felt by everyone who attended.

The programme, with the theme "Through the Years", included music that spanned the decades of club's existence, from the catchy melodies of the 1940's to the infectious disco rhythms of the 80's. Costumes were a perfect complement to the then and now of figure skating in Haliburton, all of them visual proof of the hundreds of hours of prepara-

Skater is first in 4th Figures

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

WITH HER USUAL MODESTY, Danielle LaRue doesn't think becoming the first Haliburton Figure Skating Club member to earn her Fourth Figure is something to boast about.

"I'm sure there are younger girls who have good coaches who will pass their Fourth when they're younger than I am," says the 16-year-old skater.

But the club is certainly proud that one of its member's dedication and talent has paid off so handsomely.

Test day was March 26. All year, Danielle has been practising the 10 "figures" she may be asked to do. And because skaters prefer to start off from one foot, but judging requires that you can lead off with either foot, in essence Danielle had to practice 20 figures. Seven were judged in testing.

"Figures are important for your edges, concentration and balance but these days they're getting out of figures in competition," she says. Audiences don't want to watch skaters doing circle after circle, so they tune into the dance routines and free skating programmes, which are far more creative.

Some skaters don't like figures either. But not Danielle. "It does take a lot of time but if you like it, it's not that bad."

Part of that time is spent on the road. Danielle's coach is Mary Hadley of Omemee, and every Sunday they meet in Fenelon Falls for practices. Danielle has also travelled to various meets and carnivals, where she's been guest skater.

She applies the same commitment to the other sports she participates in at school—badminton, track and field and hockey. Keeping active is something she comes by naturally and besides, "it's fun."

However, as she gets older and more time demands are placed on her, she might not be able to devote as much of her attention on skating. "When you're younger you're more ambitious but right now there's so much to do at school."

But she still plans to work her way up the test ladder, although the climb may be a slow one. No matter how high she does go, however, she still is an example for those girls just approaching the ascent.

Girls are taken to test in skating

The Carnival may put a fancy finish on the figure skating season, but for five Haliburton girls, their tension-filled performances during Low Test Day were their crowning achievements.

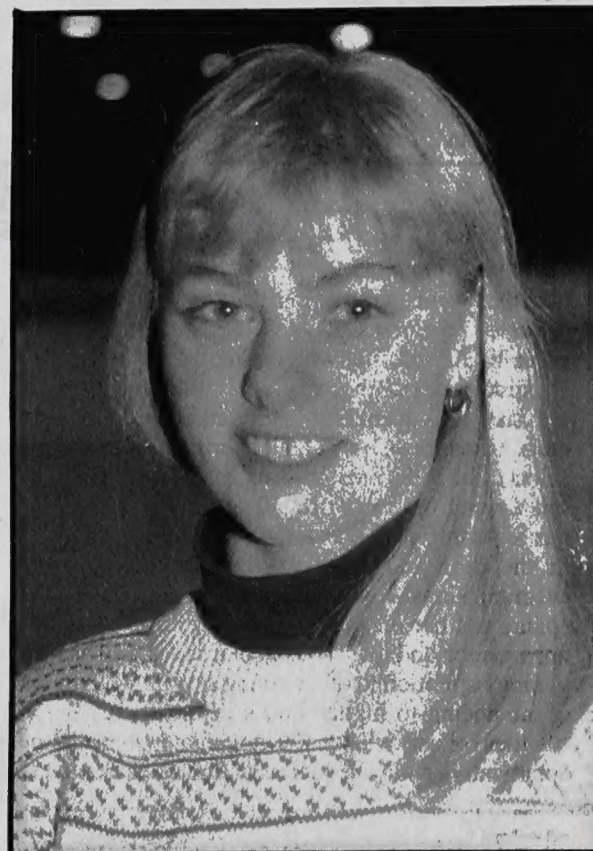

Test Days must be held every two years and on March 26 it was Haliburton's turn. Skaters from Bobcaygeon, Minden, Fenelon Falls and Haliburton completed a total of 50 tests with a 92 per cent success rate.

From the Haliburton club, Melissa Forgrave and Dawn Hebert were both successful in passing their Junior Bronze Dance, the 10 Fox. Andrea Bull's execution of the Dutch Waltz earned her her Preliminary Dance. And as mentioned in an accompanying story, Danielle LaRue passed her Fourth Figure, the highest standing anyone in the club has achieved.

"It was a pleasure to see such happy and proud skaters," says the club's Julie Hartin. "What a wonderful way to finish off their skating season."

In other club news, Tanya Easton participated in a High Test Day in Ops on March 31 and earned her Senior Silver Dance, the Starlight.

At the Fenelon Frolics on March 30, Haliburton was well represented by Alicia Sales, Nicole Cooper, Carrie Sisson, Kim Mulholland and Janine Harrison. This was Alicia's third competition and she placed second in her category. It was the first competition for the other girls, who are storing up the experience for next year's season.

"THE ELUSIVE ONE"

After running most of the night through a heavily wooded forest, a lone wolf emerges into the bright morning light. He stands still and quiet as he scans the distant lake shore for prey.

Soon after this brief interlude, he returns to the forest to continue his quest. Once again becoming the elusive one.

Haliburtonian helps to shoot Aeros to near win

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

The Toronto Aeros lost only three games in the entire season, but their third loss had a heavy weight attached. For the women's hockey team representing Ontario in the Nationals, it meant the difference between bringing home the bronze or gold medal.

"Everyone was pretty disappointed," says Marla MacNaull, a Haliburton native who's the team's right winger.

It was her first year with the Aeros and everyone had their sights set on the gold. In pre-Nationals games, the Aeros record was 50 wins and two losses. And with seven team members who had just played with Team Canada in the Worlds—winning the gold medal—victory seemed imminent.

The Nationals began on March 30 in Lloydminster, Saskatchewan. In the first pool, the Aeros cleaned up beating New Brunswick 13-1, British Columbia 7-0 and the host team, 5-1. (Saskatchewan fielded two teams—the host team and the Saskatchewan team.) With a win over 13-1 Saskatchewan following that, the Aeros were in the semi-finals.

They were matched up with Alberta. "Both teams played well and the goaltenders were extraordinary," MacNaull says. Skating was fast-paced, with the puck being chased from end to end.

After three periods, the score was tied 1-1. So they had a 10-minute over-time period. The score was still tied. Then, four minutes into the second over-time period, Alberta scored. The Aeros came out on the losing end of the final 2-1 score.

"We had been looking forward to playing Quebec," MacNaull says. "Quebec beat the Aeros last year 4-3 for the gold medal" and the Aeros wanted revenge. Instead, Alberta went on to play Quebec and lost 6-1.

The Aeros' game against the host team to see who would get the bronze was anti-climactic. The Aeros skated to a 4-1 win, and settled for a bronze medal around their necks.

MacNaull attributes part of the loss to some team members' exhaustion. Seven of the women had just returned from winning the Worlds and were very tired. The disappointment of not matching up with Quebec was worse for them, MacNaull adds.

Nonetheless, the competition was a happy one for MacNaull, a teacher in Toronto. "It was a lot of fun and an opportunity to have one thing on your mind, playing hockey."

As to whether she'll be going for gold again next year, MacNaull says "it's still up in the air." Many hours must be spent on the road and playing hockey to reach the Nationals, but wouldn't it be nice if she could win the gold...

Curlers from across Ontario entered Monmouth's Keith Cameron Memorial Trophy Bonspiel but for the first time in five years it was won by locals. In first place was a rink led by, from left, Fred Agnew, with second Jeff Smith, vice John D. Waugh and skip, George D. Waugh. In second place were vice Don Clarke, skip Don Fevreau, and second Craig Pettit, pictured below. Absent is lead Jack Wright.

Fluid jumps cause carnival crowd to gasp

tion that went into staging this year's show. Some of the best skating of the afternoon was turned in by the soloists, who basked in the brightness of spotlights and the gaze of a thousand eyes.

Lisa Carr, a member of the Minden figure skating club, turned in an outstanding performance as guest soloist. She is the most accomplished skater Haliburton County has ever produced, having completed her seventh figure and earned the right to compete in the qualifying round for the Canadian national championships. Her seemingly effortless jumps and spins, and her elegant, fluid grace drew gasps of appreciation and long, loud applause, as well as providing inspiration to other young skaters who dream of advancing to higher levels in the sport.

Other soloists who demonstrated their skills to the appreciative audience included Amberlee Pergolas, Melissa Forgrave, Laurie Turner, Jennifer Turner, Erin Turner, Sarah McMahon and Dawn Hebert.

In an afternoon filled with smiles, some of the broadest were produced by the performance of the LaRue family — Scott, Emily, Tran, Noelle and Danielle, who have been involved with the club since 1953 — skating to a country and western tune. Later in the programme, Scott LaRue gave an encore performance as Jack Frost, a role he played in some of the earliest carnivals staged by the Haliburton Figure Skating Club. Other skaters from the past who took part included Heidi Whittaker, Nancy Stinson, Shannon Stinson, Joyce Woods, Nadine Campbell, Sharon Wells, Lisa Salvatori, Cathy Dell, Nancy Elstone, Kirby Bagg and Jennifer Wilson.

All in all it was birthday celebration filled with memories, and one that will long be remembered.

Wilberforce curlers sweep trophies

For the first time in five years, the Keith Cameron Memorial Trophy, emblematic of the Men's Open Curling Bonspiel Championship held annually at the Monmouth Curling Club in Wilberforce, was won by a local entry.

With curlers entered from Toronto, Hamilton, Minden and Bancroft, including the defending championship rink of the past three years skipped this year by Lawrence Tomasini, the Monmouth C.C. fans were given plenty to cheer about as the host clubs finished 1-2-3 with the 3-game winner. George Waugh led the way with his lead, Fred Agnew, second Jeff Smith and vice John Waugh.

High 2-game winner was skip Don Fevreau and his rink of vice, Don Clarke, second Craig Pettitt and lead Jack Wright. Jim Greenwood's foursome finished in third place with the Jim Pollard rink, skipped by Humber Highland's Ted Carr, in fourth. The 1986 champion, Bob Colliver of Minden, captured fifth spot with perennial entry, Al Bronson nailing down sixth place.

A CLOSE CONTEST: The Novice game at the annual Glen Dart tournament in Haliburton on Saturday proved to be a close one, as Wilberforce just got by their Haliburton opponents 5-4.

Glen Dart tourney ends season

Haliburton's annual Glen Dart tournament brought the season to a close for several area hockey teams on Saturday.

The opening game pitted the Haliburton minor Tykes against their counterparts from Minden. When the final buzzer sounded Haliburton came out on the winning end of a 4-3 score. Ryan Kirkpatrick scored three goals for Haliburton, while Warren Cooper netted the other.

Minden's sharpshooters were Joshua Shaw, Caleb Lougheed and Andy Kinsman.

Ryan Kirkpatrick was named MVP for Haliburton. Mark Snell earned the honour for Minden.

In the Novice matchup, Wilberforce edged out Haliburton 5-4. Greg Schell and Matthew Billings each had a pair of goals for Haliburton.

Steve St. Cyr was the most valuable player for Wilberforce. Greg Schell was named MVP for Haliburton.

Game three saw Minden's major Tykes skate to a 6-3 victory over Haliburton.

Joshua Shaw was chosen MVP for Minden, while Christopher Nimigon got the nod for Haliburton.

The Atom division game saw Haliburton drop a 4-1 decision to Fenelon Falls. Haliburton's only goal was scored by Greg Schell on a penalty shot. Most valuable player for Haliburton was Jon Hebert.

The Bantam contest was a high scoring affair, as Haliburton out-pointed Beaverton 9-5. The local boys lead was threatened early in the third period, when Beaverton was just one goal behind at 6-5, but Haliburton shut the opposition down for the rest of the period to seal the win.

Paul Dovell was named the most valuable player for Haliburton.

Curling club winds up season

by HILARY LANSDOWNE

The Haliburton Curling Club wound up another successful season last week and now the various League winners are eagerly awaiting the Banquet on April 20th to pick up their awards. There are still a few tickets available which must be picked up from Edith Hoxie (457-3845) by Friday, April 13th.

On Wednesday, March 28th the High School held its closing bonspiel. Winner of the Phyllis Woodcock trophy was the rink of Kelly Youngdale, Mark Robinson, Ursula Beachli and Danny Connaughan. Second place went to Noelle LaRue, with her Vice Shannon Curry, Second Jan Haedicke and Lead Dan Garbutt. Third place went to the team of Jason Lansdowne, Dianne Garbutt, Katy Beach and Bart Whiting.

The Monday night Ladies League was won by Phyllis Woodcock's rink, with Vice Janet Bradley, Second Betty Curry and Lead Ursula Beachli.

Mixed winners from the two mixed schedules was the team of Ron Stackhouse, Sheila Stackhouse, Jamie Nicholson and Bernie Nicholson. This team has two first-year curlers on it so you see you don't have to play for years before coming up a winner!

The winning Men's rink was made up of Dale Robinson, Mark Robinson, Jon Lansdowne and Jason Lansdowne—two High School curlers here but don't worry they won't be back next year.

An honourable mention should go to the winners of the Tuesday Night Mixed Schedule 7 p.m. draw: Skip, Peter Forgrave, Vice Dorothy Wilson, Second Brad McCracken and Lead Ann Martino.

Last but not least, a Ladies rink, skipped by Phyllis Woodcock, won three game high at the Minden Curling Club last Saturday. Other members of her team were Sandra Oakley, Barb Wood and Bernice Scott.

Minden blasts Jasco Tykes, 6-3

The Jasco Drug Mart Tykes played Minden for their final game of the season in the Glen Dart tournament. The Jasco boys played hard and had fun. Though Minden were the victors, it was an exciting game for both teams.

Adam Henry opened up the scoring for the Jasco boys assisted by Logan Roberts and Ryan Wood.

Josh Shaw notched Minden's first goal, assisted by Brian Doyle and Rick Kinsmen.

The Jasco boys held Minden at bay until the last 20 seconds of period two when Danny Nielson scored, assisted by Josh Shaw and Rick Kinsman.

The play was end-to-end for most of the 3rd period, with each team testing the netminders' skills. Chris Nimigon notched a goal for the Jasco boys, assisted by Shane Campbell and Scot Curry. A few minutes later Ryan Wood, assisted by Adam Henry and defenseman Jeff Wilson, garnered another goal for the Jasco boys, tying the score. Minden's Josh Shaw displayed his skating prowess and scored the next three goals, with assists from Danny Nielson, David Burnes, Trevor Woods and Brian Doyle.

All the Jasco boys played well. Jeff Wilson, Jamie Doan, Travis Bain and Justin Winder provided a solid defense line. The forward lines played strongly, consisting of Chris Nimigon, Shane Campbell, Scot Curry, Ryan Wood, Logan Roberts and Adam Henry. Chris Petrow was superb as netminder, stopping numerous shots. Most valuable player awards went to Haliburton's Christ Nimigon and Minden's Josh Shaw. Final score was 6-3 in Minden's favour.

Tempting treats for Easter holiday

by SUSAN GROBER

Staff Reporter

LIKE MOST HOLIDAYS, the goodies offered at Easter are rich and sinfully tempting. Rainbow-coloured jelly beans, thick chocolate bunnies and oval eggs oozing with tasty fillings.

But instead of resorting to raiding your children's Easter baskets and digging through the grass for goodies, why not make a few extra of these delicious homemade chocolate eggs for the adults?

The following recipe was handed down to Haliburton's Sheryl Crighton by her mother, Aileen White. "It was a family tradition," says Mrs. Crighton. "Mother would make them for us every year, and she would give them to the kids in her Sunday school class."

If you decorate these eggs with your children's names, as Mrs. White would do, don't forget to label a few for yourself.

CHOCOLATE EASTER EGGS

To make the fondant, put in a large mixing bowl:
1 cup butter, melted
1 cup Eagle Brand sweetened condensed milk
1/2 cup corn syrup
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
2 teaspoons maple extract
1 cup chopped walnuts

Mix together—then gradually add 4 pounds sifted icing sugar. Mix with an electric mixer, then a large spoon, and then knead with hands. Form into the shape and size of an egg.

For dipping, melt in a double boiler:
1/2 pound Baker's semi-sweet chocolate
1 ounce (1/4 stick) parawax

'It was a family tradition,' Sheryl Crighton says

Dip the eggs by dropping one at a time into the hot chocolate mixture. Quickly lift out with a fork and place on wax paper until cool. Then store in cookie tins until eaten.

The following tasty bread-type specialty (and its variation) is a German tradition at Easter. And don't be afraid to try making a yeast dough! It takes time, but is not as difficult as some may think.

EASTER BREAD

Yeast Dough: 1/2 cup sugar
2 cups warm milk
2 packages active dry yeast
6 cups all-purpose flour
Pinch of salt
3/4 cup plus 2 tablespoons (200 g) butter
2 eggs
Grated peel of 1 lemon

Fruit Loaf: 1 cup chopped almonds
1-1/4 cups chopped candied lemon peel
2 cups seedless golden raisins
1-1/2 tablespoons rum
4 tablespoons (50 g) butter, melted
1/4 cup sugar

Braided Wreath: 1 egg yolk, beaten

1/2 cup slivered almonds
1/4 cup sugar
3 tablespoons rum

To make yeast dough, stir 2 teaspoons sugar into warm milk and sprinkle with yeast. Let stand 5 minutes or until the surface is frothy. Stir gently to moisten any dry particles remaining on top. Sift flour and salt into large bowl. Melt butter; cool slightly. Lightly beat butter, eggs and lemon peel into yeast mixture. Pour into flour mixture, combining to make a dough. On a floured surface, knead dough 5 to 10 minutes until smooth and elastic. Cover and let rise in a warm place 1 hour.

To make fruit loaf, combine almonds, candied peel, raisins and rum in a small bowl. Cover and let stand 30 minutes. Divide risen dough in half; knead each half lightly. Knead fruit mixture into 1 half; let stand 15 minutes. Grease a baking sheet. Let stand in a warm place 30 minutes. Preheat oven to 375 degrees F. Cut a cross on top of loaf. Bake 30 to 40 minutes or until a rich brown. While still hot, brush loaf with butter and sprinkle with sugar.

To make braided wreath, divide remaining dough into 3 equal pieces; roll into long ropes. Braid ropes; shape into a wreath. Brush with egg yolk. Combine almonds, sugar and rum in a small bowl; spread over wreath. Bake as for fruit loaf.

Mark Schell leaves 'family' when he retires

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

THEY SAY IF YOU can't stand the heat, get out of the kitchen. After 16 years in the kitchen at Hyland Crest Senior Citizens' Home, Mark Schell has proven he can handle the demanding tasks of a Food Services Supervisor. But now, he says, it's time to retire.

Schell certainly has been kept busy in the kitchen over the years by doing all the hiring and buying, planning menus, training new employees, and looking after an overall staff of 12. More importantly, he's been responsible for pleasing the palates of 60 men and women for three meals a day, seven days a week.

"These people are set in their ways and they know what they want, so we try to accommodate them," Schell says of the residents. "The average age here is 87, so these people aren't used to fancy fast foods. We have to give them good home-cooking."

Even though he often schedules the residents' favourite meal of old-fashioned chicken and dumplings, Schell still believes variety is the spice of life. So once in awhile he'll spice up the menu with something different, like a Chinese buffet which residents recently feasted on.

"You've got to give them a change, and most everyone goes for it. But you have to give them an option. When we have the Chinese buffet, there's only one person or two who would rather have the soup. Most still like to be adventurous."

For special occasions, Schell really dazzles the residents. "For St. Patrick's Day, the cooks had everything green. And I had a decorated hat. I've got a cook's hat for pretty near every occasion you could think of."

"If there's something special going on, I stay for supper. Any type of occasion, I'm in the thick of it."

Cooking for seniors is quite different from Schell's past cooking jobs. For one thing, the food is more specialized. "Anyone over 65 should watch their salt. Oh, you sneak a little in once in awhile to make them feel good, but otherwise it's pretty strict."

With two years of cooking school in Toronto, Schell's first cooking job was in the army. From there he ended up cooking at the Kingston Military Hospital. "But I did most of my cooking all around Haliburton."

He's worked at the Wig-a-mog and Chateau Woodland. And for 19 years, he looked after the high school's cafeteria. After that, Schell worked for the municipality of Dysart et al. It was Murray Fearrey who suggested he try for the job at Hyland Crest.

Working at the senior citizens' home has been a unique experience, and certainly different from the high school cafeteria.

"It's more like home here. After 16 years, I've gotten pretty close to the residents."

Being responsible for all their meals each day, Schell enjoys interaction with the 54 women and six men living at Hyland Crest. "We're pretty close. All the women are my girlfriends, and all the men are young lads. I treat them all the same."

Many residents have expressed how much they'll miss Schell when he's gone. "That's because I've spoiled them," he says. "They pretty well get what they want from me."

"I don't put something on the menu that I know they won't like. And after 16 years, I know what they'll like. If there was a big change-over with the new supervisor, I don't know how they'd take it."

Schell originally hoped to retire last year, but was talked into staying. This time it's for real. "It's difficult to leave, but you've got to leave sometime,"

"I'll sure miss him," says Hyland Crest resident Stella Stinson as she gives retiring kitchen supervisor Mark Schell a warm hug.

he says.

But Schell certainly doesn't want to become idle. When he isn't practising his hobby of making axe handles and paddles, he plans to hunt and fish in "God's country" from his trailer at Haliburton Forest. "If you want to find me, that's where I am most of the weekends."

And he promises to stay out of wife Edna's kitchen. "She's had a routine over the last 35 or 40 years, and she doesn't want me to interfere."

Schell is actually leaving in May, and hopes a new supervisor is hired soon enough so he can get involved with the training. "I hope whoever gets this job will put 110 per cent in making sure these residents are looked after," he says.

"Of all the people in the county, I feel senior citizens are the special ones. And maybe the ones at Hyland Crest are a little more special."

Potty parity...

husbands waiting long enough by the time they came out.

Her 1988 study confirmed what just about everyone but the mostly-male plumbing engineers who wrote building code specifications knew: it took the women twice as long to get in, get done, and get out.

I find it interesting that, with all the activity on behalf of women's rights we've had in the last twenty years that it has taken until now for this particular inequity to be getting the attention it obviously deserves.

I know I can't recall ever seeing anything on the subject in Canada until now, although I am sure that, with the growing agitation for plumbing equality in the U.S., it is sure to become an issue here soon. I wouldn't be too surprised to hear that surveys are underway in various corners of our great land...

Maybe Sheila Copps will recognize 'potty parity' for the opportunity it is, and incorporate the cause into her Liberal leadership campaign. After all, the women will be all for the improvement on their behalf. And their husbands will benefit as well.

Stranger things have won elections...

Primary kids tattle on the Easter bunny

Here comes Peter Cottontail, hopping down the bunny trail. Hippiy, hoppity, Easter's on its way...

by SUSAN GROBER

Staff Reporter

EASTER IS A TIME to rejoice in new beginnings. Both commemorating the resurrection of Jesus Christ after his crucifixion, and the forthcoming of springtime, it's a day of celebration.

However, for many of those under four feet tall, Easter also marks the arrival of a certain generous rabbit.

Although he usually travels incognito, the children in Pat Brezina's Kindergarten class at the Archie Stouffer primary school in Minden seem to know all about the illusive Easter bunny. During a recent visit to their classroom, The Echo learned some interesting facts.

"I've never seen him, but he's white though," says Matthew Kenney. "With black eyes and a black nose."

"I think he has a pink nose," counters Cheryl Ripley, who wriggles hers to demonstrate.

Most of the kids admit they've never actually seen the Easter bunny. Except for Andy Kinsman, who re-tells his exciting encounter last year.

"He went by my bedroom to give me Easter eggs and a hockey game. I woke up and saw him. But he didn't see me," Andy says.

"He has to sneak, so he comes at night."

And what does the Easter bunny leave behind on his trip through people's homes?

"Eggs, and jelly beans, and candy, and chocolate, and toys..." Patrick Seabrooke could go on for hours.

"Last year I got stick-on earrings," pipes in Cheryl.

Why would he leave eggs? "Cos it's Easter and 'cos he's a bunny," says David Bloomfield.

"He's big," says Andy. "He carries a lot."

"And he has real long ears," Aaron Kentner says.

Part of the fun on Easter Sunday is checking every nook and cranny for treats hidden by the bunny while you are still in your pajamas. "He makes us search," says David.

"The Easter bunny doesn't hide my things," says Patrick. "Last year he put them on the radio."

The bunny's reason for being so coy is simple, says Cheryl. "He doesn't want you to see where he hides the eggs."

Chocolate eggs seem to be the favourite of the class, with candy eggs coming in a close second.

And, of course, many also get the standard hard-boiled kind dyed in a rainbow of bright colours.

"The Easter bunny has pet chickens," Cheryl says.

How can an ordinary chicken lay such colourful eggs? "He uses magic," explains Chad Pentney. Ah, the Easter bunny has the power to perform magic. "No," says Chad. "He uses magic markers."

Where do the chocolate eggs come from? "He puts chocolate in the chicken's mouth and the chocolate egg comes out the other end."

We all know that another favourite visitor, Santa Claus, lives at the North Pole. As for the Easter bunny, we can't come to a consensus.

"He lives in a big hole under the ground with the groundhogs," says Jamie Collins.

David disagrees. "He lives down south."

All right, these kids must be real experts. But when it comes to explaining the importance of Easter, the children aren't so sure.

"It's to celebrate baby Jesus's birthday," says Matthew. Well, not exactly, Mrs. Brezina tells him.

"I remembered, but I forget it," says David.

If you ask these children what they would like for Easter, a few are willing to rattle off a list that would seem suitable for Christmas.

"I want some more stick-on earrings 'cos I only have one more pack," says Cheryl.

"I would like some teenage turtles," says Matthew. Doesn't he already have any of those Mutant Ninja creatures? "Not even one."

Amy Fountain wants the "Ninja turtle guy who can turn into a fly." But Kim and Melissa Hartwick and Kerry Alton would all prefer a P.J. Sparkles doll.

The majority of the kids agree with Andrew Mansfield that the traditional foil-wrapped chocolate Easter eggs are quite the desirable treat. Still, it's chocolate chip cookies that make Timmy Heming's tastebuds tingle.

However, one of the more unusual wishes comes from Danny Sully. What would he like? "A worm," Danny says. Mrs. Brezina asks for a little more clarification. "A driving worm. It's just a worm."

Whether their wishes are granted or not, one thing is certain. These children know who to expect if they happen to wake up extra early this Sunday morning. Let's just hope the Easter bunny knows what he's in for.

Tykes show some superb plays assisted by Kyle Robinson and Andrew Sachs, ending the second at 2-all.

The action was end-to-end in the third period, with Minden testing out the netminders skills of Joel Cooper. He came through with flying colours, making save after save.

Warren Cooper, assisted by Kyle Robinson and Andrew Sachs, notched another goal for Haliburton and halfway through the third period Andy Kinsman managed to slip one by Cooper, assisted by Nicholas Mitchel and Curtis Danilko with only a few minutes left in the game. Haliburton's Ryan Kirkpatrick produced another goal, earning himself a hat trick. He was assisted by Kyle Robinson and Andrew Sachs.

Good allround defense by Darran Kirkpatrick, Ryan Chalmers and Morgan English ended the cause. The forward line consisted of Warren Cooper, Kyle Robinson, Ryan Kirkpatrick, Alex Ambridge, Andrew Sachs and Jeremy Mieske played strongly. Joel Cooper was superb as netminder. Most valuable players the game were Haliburton's Ryan Kirkpatrick and Minden's Mark Snell.

German teens still suffer stigma

turn to East Germany, where trained workers are bountiful."

As is wont to happen everywhere, though, some of those West Germans who didn't want to work in a garage, now resent the East Germans who do. "People in West Germany also need jobs (so) it's no wonder they get aggressive in the West."

The gateway to West Germany for may has been

Berlin, now that the wall has come tumbling down. "Berlin was the capital and it's worth seeing Berlin because it's very beautiful. It's very green with many parks. It's the place where theatre is going, cafes. It's a special place."

Many would like to see the political walls disappear as well, but Angelika is hesitant to endorse reunification, although she would like to see families get back together.

"I'm careful with this reunion because, well... who can say the Germany can again be a powerful country," she says. "When you see what West Germany has done after the war, for the businessman, East Germany is very interesting. When it's reunited again, perhaps they can make the same out of East Germany."

But Angelika thinks German youths would not like to turn that into military strength. "Because teenagers see television and radio, and take history in school, they learned what happened in the war so they don't want war anymore. They're afraid of it."

There was a rise of neo-Nazism, first as a backlash against Turkish and Greek immigrants, and then members tried to get into East German government during the last elections. Others rose to stop them, however. Nonetheless, it's unsettling to have the past resurrected in such a way.

Angelika and her friends talk a lot about politics, and the world they want to help shape. Unlike many Canadian teenagers who prefer to discuss music and movie stars, "We think it is very important to be in these political things, to know what happens to us and the places that surround us. Also the environment."

"Sometimes we talk about friends, but usually that are not superficial and go much deeper."

"(Teenagers here) think more about themselves than they do anyone else," says Andrew. Why? He's not sure. "Everything is pretty well given to us."

Even if German teenagers wanted to be blithe about life, Angelika says others would quickly remind them what being German can still mean in other countries.

"When some of my girlfriends went to France, they're still regarded as Nazis and they couldn't understand why. They said 'But we are the next generation. It's not our fault what our grandfathers did decades ago.' It's not easy."

Stigma aside, Angelika has let nothing dissuade her from seeing the world beyond German borders. She's explored France, Belgium, Denmark, Indonesia—"that's where my mother comes from"—and now Canada.

"I heard that it was a cold and rough country with many beautiful landscapes," she says of her preconceptions. But what has overwhelmed her the most is its space. "Everything is so wide, so big, so open. The people are also open and friendly."

In a family atlas, the Ways found that there are 265 people per square kilometre in Germany. In Canada there are 2.65. Whatever window she looks out of at the Way house, all Angelika can see is bush. (This time of year, she can also see the buckets on Mrs. Way's family's maple sugar bush, which they tap each year.)

Also, Canada's highways aren't the autobahn. "Everyone here drives very slowly and carefully." And yet wonders upon wonders, one of the cars on the road is Andrew's Volkswagen Beetle. "It's like a piece of old Germany, I love it."

Last week, Angelika tried to tell a friend in a letter what Canada was like. But she couldn't. "I have so many new impressions, I didn't know where to start."

One impression she'll certainly take home however, is that good penpals can become good friends. Two years of letter-writing proved a very strong foundation for Andrew and Angelika's friendship, and now that they've talked in person, that friendship is bound to get strong. (Angelika's mother has already issued an invitation to all of the Ways to visit them in Germany.)

"I think it's great," says Andrew, who's been glad that Angelika is the one who's had to do most of the talking. "Now I can know who I'm writing to."

County libraries now open longer

COUNTY LIBRARY NEWS

by: JOEL LEVIS

FUNDING FOR AN ADDITIONAL 16 open hours per week has been approved for most Branches of the Haliburton County Public Library system. Increased hours became effective April 1, 1990, in most cases while others do not come into place until after Easter.

Branches are located in Cardiff, Dorset, Gooderham, Haliburton, Highland Grove, Minden, Stanhope and Wilberforce.

Increases will be made in a manner most appropriate to the results of the Users Survey conducted in 1989 and may vary from branch to branch. In some branches, new hours may be assigned to the morning which is of benefit for pre-schoolers and others may see hours assigned in the evening for the benefit of students. Lunch hour branch users should check for changes as well.

For current hours information, patrons are advised to check their local branch or call County Library Headquarters at 457-2241.

While increases may seem modest, when taken as a whole they greatly augment both service capabilities already in place and public access. At the same time, this represents the first major adjustment in this area over many years and also reflects the increased potential demand for services and facilities.

Keeping future demands in mind, the Board has also approved a new set of criteria for the adjustment of future open hours on a branch-by-branch basis.

Henceforth, the Board will review the activity of each individual branch on an annual basis in the light of established criteria, primarily programming activity and direct circulation.

Branches exceeded minimal criteria will be assigned additional open hours—subject to the availability of funds—whereas other branches which fail to maintain their former position will have hours reduced.

This rationalization will ensure the most effective and efficient use of hours available.

Now more than ever, if you've got a question, you can get an answer at any of the nine branches of the Haliburton County Library.

SECTION 2

This is a story about the "Strawberry Harrison's"

Evangeline and Edmund Harrison believed in an honest day's work and so did their children. In 1922, the family gathered in the garden. Standing in the back row with her parents and Baby Elsie is Alma. In the front row is Evelyn (who died 5 years later), Allen, Alfred, Bert and Walter. To learn more about their youth, read on...

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

LET'S NOT SAY Edmund and Effie Harrison were strict with their seven children. Instead, let's say Alma, Walter, Evelyn, Bert, Alfred, Allen and Elsie were simply taught the value of an honest day's work.

Such honest days begin at daybreak, that's true; when the children have to leave the warmth of their beds to trundle out to the barn where the cows, horses, pigs and chickens require attention. Breakfast awaits the children in the kitchen only after the animals' needs are met, and then it's off for the proverbial, yet accurate, two-mile walk to school.

School in its own special way is an escape from responsibilities. Here one plays with friends, gets a game going during the lunch hour and acts in a truly childlike way.

Steps might be light on the way home, but Edmund and Effie soon hasten the children to the barn where more chores await. As well, someone's got to break a hole in the ice of Lake Kashagawigamog so the cows can drink, and everyone's got to be careful not to knock over the coal oil lamps which hang from nails on rafters, lighting their way.

Inside the house, mother's homecooked meal gives them back their energies—energy to get themselves off to bed, for one rarely ever stayed up past nine in a house with no electricity.

Aha, you say. That's just weekdays the Harrison children are reminiscing about. On weekends they probably snuck out the back to their friends' house to play all day. Everyone knows what children are like.

Not quite. These aren't the "Strawberry Harrison's" for nothing. It's the children's responsibility to weed the three acres of strawberry patch for the grand sum of 10 cents a row. And since pick-your-own farms weren't heard of yet, the children also had to pick the ripe berries. If enough customers didn't come to the farm, their parents would sell the strawberries in town.

A trip to Minden or Haliburton from their home half-way between the two was an all-day affair, and one not often enjoyed by the children. The threeseater Democrat would have the back seat taken out and the strawberries were packed in neat rows. Stores sold their strawberries for 25 cents a quart; the Harrisons would undercut them by a dime and a good bargain was hard to resist.

Yes, an honest day's work is the nicest way to put it.

"Our parents gave us plenty of discipline—"with lots of love mixed with it," adds Alfred—and it was easy to get it," says Bert.

THE SIX REMAINING SIBLINGS are gathered at the house (just before the Bethel Church Road) where four of them now live. Because the four brothers would all be Mr. Harrison, and all of them—perhaps except for Walter, who's more quiet at first—like to talk, they will be referred to by their first names. The two sisters, Alma Peel and Elsie McPhail, will be called by their proper names.

It's Walter, Bert, Allen and Mrs. McPhail who share the house Allen built a couple of decades ago. Passersby on Highway 121 between Minden and Haliburton know their former homestead for its honey-, or corn-, or strawberries-for-sale signs in the summer. This house is just east of that. Alfred, a widower, lives on his own in Wilberforce and Alma and her husband Victor have moved back from Norland to live on the old homestead.

That only leaves Evelyn to account for, and thus begins one of the only sad tales in this story. When Evelyn was a young teenager, she and some siblings were travelling by sleigh. Evelyn's toque fell over her eyes and she couldn't see she was too close to the edge. When she fell off, her head struck a stone jutting up from the snow.

Knocked unconscious, Evelyn soon recovered but she was, in the ways people could be in the days before modern technology, never the same after that. Two years later, because of a buildup of fluid in her head, she died.

"If she could have got to the doctor, she could have had it drained," her brothers and sisters agree, sharing memories of the only sibling they've lost. Just like their mother probably could have lived more than her 55 years had the resources been available.

But such tragedies, just as discipline, were accepted as the hardships of farm life in Haliburton County at the beginning of the century.

BOTH EDMUND HARRISON and Effie Eastman were born in the Allsaw Flats area. The Eastmans came from across Lake Kashagawigamog, near Ingoldsby, and Edmund's parents, Peter and Evangeline, farmed the north side. Lakeshore property's lure was its easy access to drinking water for both man and beast.

The younger Harrison's children arrived in this order: Alma, 1906; Walter, 1910; Bert, 1913; Alfred, 1917; Allen, 1918; and "the baby", Elsie,

1921. Elsie would be only 13 when her mother died, and the coping skills she learned as a result are now put to good use as she mothers her brothers. (When there's one woman in a house of three men, our culture correctly predicts who cooks the meals and keeps the house clean, although the brothers do the dishes.)

Growing up might have meant a lot of hard work, but when they look back on those years now, there are no regrets and many smiles.

At first, "family" included two "home girls" and two "home boys," in other words, young children from England who were taken from their own

Please turn to page 20

In their younger days, Walter and Allen, seated, were known to get in a tussle or two. "We got in trouble once in a while," laughs Allen, who now spends much of his time working on his computer. Walter is the diplomat of the family.

The youngest and the oldest: When their mother died at a very young age, care of the house fell to Elsie, on left, who was only 13. Older sister Alma had already married Victor Peel and moved to his homestead in Norland.

Bert and Alfred can recall their happy days of youth families and brought to Canada by people such as Dr. Bernardo.

In some homes these children were very badly treated, used practically as slaves, ill-fed and under-clothed.

But not at the Harrisons', although one home boy did accidentally drown and one home girl, Daisy, gave the impression "she wasn't at all happy the way she had been used before."

"We treated them like one of the family, all of them," the siblings agree. Of course, as one of the family that meant they had much work to do, the girls in the house, the boys on the farm.

"Dad, he was a great chap for work and we followed," says Alfred, who talks in a rapid-fire manner. "We weren't slave drivers but we kept at it."

Nutritious meals were plentiful, but sometimes hard to come by in the winter. Breakfast was oatmeal, a packed lunch filled them at school and their mother's preserved vegetables and fruit helped them through dinner. Milk was a luxury.

"We only had one milk cow which we called a stripper. You only got a little from her. In those times, you didn't have proper feed to keep them going all winter, just beaver hay. That's wild hay that grows in a swamp. All it did was keep them alive."

Fun, mixed in with a little learning of course, was to be had at school. Highway 121 as we know it wasn't built yet and school was two miles down laneways and across fields—a much quicker trip in the winter when they could use skis the neighbouring Finlanders taught them to make. "Alma and Walter have them yet."

"I remember coming home in a terrific storm," Bert says of one trip without skis. "We had to go like cows, one breaking the trail and then trading off" with someone behind who would continue the exhausting work.

Leaving home at eight, it took them an hour to reach the Allsaw school; "when skiing was good we went half that time."

There was one day when Walter almost flew home.

The children had been playing outside during lunch. As happens with children, Allen was so carried away searching for a lost ski in the snow without his mitts on, little did he realize his hand was frozen. The children panicked, not knowing what to do because the teacher was not yet back from lunch.

"Walter skied home to get a treatment of electric oil, Dr. Thomas's liniment," one remembers.

"I know how I screamed when they tried to put snow on it," Allen says of the children's original treatment. It hurt for awhile, but the doctor in a bottle seemed to do the trick.

Few other transportation options were available in the summer until by dint of hard work, Alfred and Allen bought bicycles.

Raising the money wasn't easy, once they saw the $27.50 price-tag in the Eaton's catalogue. Their parents agreed to pay them 10 cents for every row of strawberry plants they weeded. (At that time the Harrisons thought it was best to keep the plants separate; now they know to let them run together.)

That's 275 rows they weeded before it was time to pick up their special order at the Gelert train station. Those bicycles would travel across many miles in their time.

"When we got to handling it better, we took Elsie on the cross bar," Alfred says of this new improved way to get to school.

School was a one-room wood building heated by the woodstove the children loved to huddle around. "Some mornings it would be still be quite cold. We wrote on slates in those days and if we got water sprinkled on them, it froze," says Bert. "We'd have to take it to the fire to thaw out."

At times there were 10 to 16 children for the teacher to supervise—McKnights, Robertsons, Duncans, Blairs, Rennells and of course, Harrisons, among others.

"Mostly we had good teachers," Bert says. "They nearly all said it was a good school, too. One teacher, on the first day of school, said 'I know what you folks are thinking. I'm just going to tell you that if you'll be good to me, I'll be good to you.' Well, apparently we must have been. She was the best."

"She'd take up one class at a time and bring them up to the front," they say of their teacher's methods. Sometimes they'd get to go to the lake to study the nature there. Civic pride was taught on Arbor Day, when they'd comb the schoolyard with their pots and pans, picking up garbage.

Another big event was the Christmas Concert,

One of the ways Bert made a living was by cutting lake ice in the winter, storing it in sawdust, and then selling it to Lake Kashagawigamog cottagers in the summer.

complete with its boxed social and recitals. "Alma had a real tongue twister," her brothers say, encouraging her to tell it again. "I started on a little journey just about a week ago for that little town of Morrow in the state of Ohio. I never was a traveller and really didn't know, that Morrow had been ridiculed nearly a century ago... The train that goes to Morrow is about a day away."

Anyone who's met the Harrisons today knows that they are all gentle, church-going, hard-working, law-abiding citizens. Were they always that way?—be honest.

"Oh, we were perfect," Allen says with a laugh that suggests the opposite. "Oh, we got in trouble once in awhile."

The boys all break into pink-faced laughter when they remember one trick, checking with each other that it's okay to tell this one.

One winter lunch-hour, they built a nice set of steps leading up to the school. But one of the stairs was a false one, fashioned out of snow. "The teacher went home for dinner and when she came back, she fell into it."

"She went home at George Robertson's and we weren't supposed to be tearing around in the school. Well, we got doing that. We were running around her desk and there was a container with ink in it. Of course, the desk got pulled off the platform and the inkwell got upset. The children were quite concerned if it got on the register."

"When the teacher came back, she looked at it and brought the class to attention and said 'Accidents will happen.' She was very diplomatic. That's all the correction we got."

"These things just happen when teachers go for lunch. One teacher had a large umbrella and some of us got it out and started jumping off the steps with it, like it was a parachute. Well, it collapsed and broke the ribs so we had to tell her when she got back."

A less destructive game was Antie Antie Over. "You threw the ball over the school and the other ones were to catch it. If they caught it three times, they could run around the school to tag us," Allen explains. "There was not much baseball because we had a small yard. But there were lots of leaves in the fall. We'd bury someone and get a switch, and hit the top of the bundle of leaves. As soon as they hit the person, he would jump out and try to catch us before we got to the fence."

The game New York and New Jersey is a bit harder to explain. "You'd tell the other side a secret, perhaps which society you were going to represent and the other side would ask 'Where are you from and what's your trade,'" Mrs. McPhail remembers. "I often say that yet. Then they would act out a trade. It could be churning butter, or scrubbing the floors and when they could guess it, it was their turn."

Such talk brings the siblings' minds back to that overwhelming presence in their lives. Work. "What would you do when you got home? Work, work, get the chores done," Bert says. "You asked what we had for recreation, it was mainly work."

"Our parents were rather strict but they taught us good," adds Allen. "Mother always said 'You make sure when you're out at somebody's place you don't pick up anything.' You don't covet and you don't steal and they taught us not to tell lies."

"They forbid smoking and drinking and we weren't allowed to swear. When I was young, before I went to school, my mother told Alfred and I 'If you hear Alfred swearing you should tell me' and Alfred was to do the same on me. So we didn't know any better than to tell on each other."

"One time we were down in the barn," Alfred continues, "and my dad caught me smoking. 'As far as I'm concerned, it's against my principles, but if you do smoke, come out like a man,' he told me. I threw the cigarette down on the barn floor and trampled over it."

"If you get too strict, you're more liable to smoke," says psychologist Walter.

Now, if there was a trouble spot in the youngsters' lives, it was the boys' propensity to get into fights. Walter says "Alfred and I went down to get a pail of water. Dad had been in the field and he was sweating. We primed the pump and we got quarrelling over who would do the pumping and we got wrestling. Suddenly we felt 'Wang! Wang!' Dad had come down and taken off his braces and was giving us the strap."

Hearing this story, one might be surprised to learn that Walter became the diplomat of the family (perhaps because he talks the least). "Walter's policy," says Bert, "has always been that if you see you're not going to win an argument, give in to the other fellow. You shouldn't be too determined which one has the right of way."

"Young couples, if they get in any sign of an argument, they should try to reason things out and talk low," Walter adds. "If you do get in a mix-up, go directly to the person and talk things over."

Even quiet times were sometimes shared in youth. "Even before I went to school," says Bert, "in the mornings I'd get up at breaking day and I can remember Mother sitting knitting, and I'd sit alongside her. Then she'd whisper 'I think we'd better get up and do the dishes.' I would go into the winter kitchen and wash up."

"I can't remember my mother sitting down with a book. She'd read the Bible, and Father liked his newspaper. Dad would take the paper and read alongside the table and us boys did the chores."

Favourite papers were the Family Herald, Weekly Star and the Farmer's Advocate.

Treat time for the children was a trip to "the little country store down at Ingoldsby, Nick Barr's. You could buy a licorice plug for a cent, an all-day sucker for a cent, and a chocolate bar was a nickel."

Sometimes they were allowed to accompany their parents into Haliburton or Minden. "In the Thirties, you could go to town and see three cars on the street. One car we had was a 1918 Ford which we bought for $15 and we run it for two years. We never bought anything for it but cord tires. But the roads certainly weren't too good. We used to take the car out in the field. Once, someone came up to sell us a car, a Durant. We got to go 25 miles per hour and we thought we were speeding."

IN TELLING THE STORY of the Harrisons, it would be easier to say what they didn't do to earn their keep than try to describe everything.

There were the 2,600 trees they tapped to make and sell maple syrup. There were Bert's bees which, in a feat he marvelled at, provided him with honey without any processing. There was Alfred's working at the logging camps and almost being frozen to death trying to find the one at Loon Lake. There was the stoker they perfected, with its eight-foot-long teeth "which could make a tall pile" of hay. Cutting ice to deliver to people's homes brought in a few dollars as well.

And as this is really a story about their childhood, descriptions of their adult lives will be brief.

At Bethel Church, Alma married Victor Peel who homesteaded in Norland. Now getting up in years, the two moved to the old Harrison property to be closer to her family.

Marriage also saw Walter leave home. In 1939, he married Eleanor Golden of Fenelon Falls and then farmed in Fenelon for 29 years, raising three children at the same time. When Eleanor died in 1986, he moved in with Allen and Elsie.

Bert stayed on the farm and waited until 1965 to marry. He kept on with the maple syrup business, at once time the largest in the county, until 1966, although they did make syrup "in a small way" starting in 1977.

It was Alfred who got the farthest from home for the longest time. He found a job in Toronto in 1942 and a short time later, married Ruth Flewelling. They had three girls but sadly, the youngest died of leukemia. After working at Lever Brothers until 1982, Alfred retired and bought a house in Wilberforce.

Just before Alfred left for Toronto, Allen went to Pentecostal Bible College. He would be a strong force in the church, but he earned his living logging in the bush. He's not bad at designing and building houses either, and it's his own house he and his siblings live in now.

Elsie joined him at Bible college but a year before she graduated in 1942, she married Cecil McPhail. They lived in the Agincourt area raising their five children. Tragedy struck her family when in 1981, son David's only son, Ronnie, was hit by a car on Highway 121 in front of her present home.

No story about the Harrisons would be complete, however, without talking about the faith in God which guided them through life.

"We were Baptists but we didn't get real deep in spiritual things until the Pentecostal movement came into the country in about '34," says Allen.

"There were a few camp meetings and Mom and Dad took us. We went every Sunday, though I'm not sure if they had services in the winter."

"There used to be great crowds came to the church meetings. Bert Mintz held meetings at Grandma Eastman's. The fullness of the spirit is what they were teaching and there was quite a revival. We'd go in at 7, sing until 8:30 until he'd start to preach."

"Now we go to Allsaw Pentecostal Church. (I stuck with the Baptists,' Albert says, adding he's read the Bible 34 times.) Christ offers us eternal life and when you get it into your heart, it's something worth working for."

"We have lived a quite comfortable life," Bert begins to sum up. "Things didn't always run smooth but we didn't take it too serious. Serving the Lord makes it a help."

"You honour your mother and your father, and I like to think that had something to do with our happiness," adds Mrs. McPhail.

"The first thing is you need to have a good understanding of life and the only way you can do that is know your creator so you can lead a life God intended you to have," says Allen. "Then you must realize that parents are our teachers and we should be obedient. Those who have good parents should appreciate them and realize they're teachers."

"You can learn things from older people. Their instructions certainly are valuable. There are things I didn't use wisdom in and I made some mistakes which were not necessary I had had listened more to older folks."

Now that the Harrison children are the Harrison adults, people would do well to follow their advice and sit down and talk with them awhile. They still have many more stories to tell, and not just a little wisdom to share.

'We have lived quite a comfortable life,' the siblings agree, even though it must have been cramped with seven children in this log cabin.

Ouija board is spooky fun

DOWN OUR ROAD

and set it up on the kitchen table. Wendy had always been good at that sort of thing, so they asked her to take the first turn. She placed her hand loosely on the wooden pointer, closed her eyes for a minute, then asked the spirit of the Ouija board if it was there. Nothing happened. The cousin gave a little laugh and the others shushed him. Wendy tried again, asking the spirit to make its presence known.

Then the pointer started to move. Slowly it slid over to the word 'yes' and stopped. "You moved your hand, Wendy. I saw you do it," the cousin remarked accusingly.

"No I didn't," came her reply. "Now keep quiet or you'll ruin everything." Again she turned her attention to the board, asking it if she had moved the marker herself. Once more it started to slide over the board surface, stopping at the word 'no'. Wendy looked at her cousin, but said nothing. She then asked the spirit to identify itself. After a moment of nothing, the pointer was in motion again, zig-zagging all over the board but landing on no particular spot. It stopped but only for a second before moving towards the letters of the alphabet that ran across the top of the board. In quick succession it spelled out a word, but no one understood what it meant. It was like gibberish.

Despite efforts by Wendy for clarification, the pointer continued to spell out the same mysterious word. Wendy was becoming frustrated and the others were tiring of this silly game. The cousin was just about to suggest another game of Monopoly when the pointer flew right off the board, landing upside down on the other side of the room.

Something had happened to Wendy. She had turned white, as though the blood had drained from her face and she was staring off into space. No, not really staring. She seemed to be looking at something that wasn't there, focusing on a point just above the table, directly across from her. From her mouth came one word. "You!" she said, almost as though she recognized whatever she saw that no one else saw. A cold breeze moved through the kitchen. Yet the windows all remained closed, shut against the cold night rain. Slowly Wendy started to stand, still looking in the same direction. Her arm came up, finger pointed ahead of herself until it was aimed at the very place her gaze was glued. "You!" she repeated, her voice louder now.

All the while this strange scene was unfolding, the others sat as though frozen. No one could deny the look on Wendy's face was anything but genuinely strange. Almost hypnotized, the onlookers were drawn into the events like an audience watching a play. They were involved, yet apart.

There was a sudden change in the air of the room as Wendy moved away from the table, her finger still extended. Then she dropped it and started dashing about the room as though chasing something. First to one side of the tiny kitchen over by the counter top; then the other near the woodstove. Before they knew it she had darted into the living room, barely missing furniture in her haste. All the while, she was shouting, "Get out!" at the top of her lungs, fear and determination mixed together in her voice. For a minute she disappeared into the back bedroom but re-emerged, still in pursuit of something unseen. Her voice was becoming hoarse. Now terrified, the others watched in fascination as Wendy ended up facing the far corner of the living room, continuing to croak the words, "Get out." Without warning, from somewhere deep inside her, a piercing scream erupted. The hair on everyone's head stood straight up as Wendy collapsed into a heap on the floor.

They ran over to her, but she had fainted. Slapping her hands and cheeks, they could get no response. A chunk of ice from the freezer held against her temple did the trick as her eyes fluttered open.

Wendy remembered none of it. When she asked why she was on the floor they told her what had happened. Even in the telling, they felt their skin bump and hair rise. But it twiggled no memory on her part.

The sun finally came out the next morning. In the bright light of day, the cousin brought the box with the Ouija board out of the cottage and threw it as far as he could into the bush. No one wanted to take it in their car to the dump. To this day, none of them will even look at a Ouija board. They brought a tape deck to the cottage on their next trip and on rainy nights play it long and loud until bedtime.

DECISIONS, DECISIONS: Margaret Everitt and Joanne Vottero had plenty of items to choose from at Saturday's Flea Market at the Haliburton Legion.

BRANCH 624
by: Edwin Scott

We are commencing our April birthday party at 1600 hours (4 p.m.) on Saturday, April 14th. Roger Woodcox has promised to bring his guitar. Let's have a party.

Bill Brooks has a candle light roast beef dinner planned for Saturday, April 21. For further information see notice board at the Branch. Tickets are available at the bar.

May we suggest that you circle May 8 on your calendar. This is election night at Branch 624. Please plan to turn out and support the comrades you believe are best qualified for the Executive as this will be for a two-year term.

For information of newcomers or returning "snow-birds", our Branch features bingo on Monday, darts on Wednesday and euchre on Thursday nights at 7:30.

Our sympathy goes out to Comrade Harry Clark, whose sister Elaine passed away recently.

Switch from motor oil to cocktails angers

LAKE

Dianne Powell and Leanne Powell are home after a delightful holiday in the Dominican Republic. They had rain most every day but that did not deter their holiday spirit.

It is rather sad to hear that Riverside Garage will be converted to a dining and cocktail lounge, and closed soon so far as being a garage. With liquor available in so many dining areas, the liquor and beer store, where drinkers can purchase their drinks, must we have another outlet? However, I wish Paul and Pat the best of luck and hope that those who "over indulge" do not make them regret their decision to switch businesses.

Time for students to think prom

STUDENT LIFE AT HHSS

by: ERIN LYNCH

ON THE NEWS, in the papers, and in magazines, we hear about AIDS. But do we ever give thought to the possibility of us getting AIDS?

Last Monday the school mentioned that there would be a program that night on CBC about AIDS and recommended that the students watch it. It was not to be in scientific talk and would be easy to understand. I asked a couple of students who had watched it what they thought.

"It was very interesting. I found out what it was all about and how it is going to affect our lives," a female student said.

Another student said, "You don't hear about people in Haliburton getting AIDS and don't think of it as a problem!"

The first student disagreed. "I think it can be a problem anywhere. It only takes one person to start the cycle."

The problem is that many students think as the one student did, that since we don't hear about people who have AIDS in Haliburton we shouldn't worry, that it's more a problem in large cities such as Toronto. But what should we do, not take any action until someone we know gets AIDS, possibly a friend, family member or ourselves? No, we start thinking ahead, and this was exactly the message of the program. I think it answered a lot of questions students had and were too embarrassed to ask. I'm hopeful it helped dispel myths about AIDS and gave people a better understanding of the risks they face.

The Grade 9 art classes are designing this year's ever approaching Prom. This year's theme is 'A Night In Paris'.

This is the time of year when girls are trying to decide whether or not to buy a prom dress, and wondering if that special someone will ask them or if they'll end up going stag or sitting at home wishing they had asked someone.

The boys are thinking of the girls they'd like to ask and making sure they already haven't been, getting the nerve to ask and imagining what to do if the girl says no.

Prom is a little more than a month away and it is a good time to start thinking of people and dresses!

Congratulations to the badminton team for bringing home the trophy at last Tuesday's game.

Comrades choose their nominees

LEGION NEWS

by: MABEL BRANNIGAN

Zone Commander Ken Bell attended Branch 129 to conduct Branch nominations last Thursday night. Because the Zone Commander and Deputy Zone Commander are extremely busy at this time of year, our Annual Meeting on May 3 will commence at 7:30 p.m. instead of 8:00 p.m. President Sally Bonner and an election team from Branch 636, Minden, will assist Deputy Zone Commander Sylvia Sisson with the elections. Please bring a pot luck and enjoy a social evening after joint installation with the Ladies Auxiliary, when their Zone Commander Marg McLean will be in attendance. The slate of nominations is as follows: President —

Mabel Brannigan; First Vice President — Wally Chambers, Ken Fieldhouse, Al Cooper, David Stirrett, Ed Pickard; Second Vice President Ken Fieldhouse, Wally Chambers, David Stirrett, Ed Pickard, Steve Giles; Third Vice President — Al Cooper, David Stirrett, Steve Giles; Secretary — Jack Bassett; Treasurer — Wally Chambers, Doreen Hawman, Ed Pickard; Executive Members — Ken Fieldhouse, Lloyd Whitaker, Bruce McKay, Elsie Massey, Maxine Cross, Bill Juby, David Stirrett, Beryl Gorin, Ed Pickard, Doreen Hawman, Grenville Draper, Ian Craig, Irene Higgins; Auditors — Dawson Gray.

Several comrades have been ill with the flu and other ailments. We extend our best wishes for their recovery. We are pleased to report that Ray Scott is home from the hospital.

Also, we welcome home those who have been on winter holidays. It is good to see you at the meetings and in the clubroom again.

April is a busy month for our Branch. The President and other members will be assisting throughout the Zone with elections and installations in other branches. Twelve members will attend the District Convention and Drumhead Service in Belleville on the last weekend of April.

The Ladies Auxiliary held a successful flea market, and a good crowd was out for Elsie Massey's ham roll. The two lucky draw tickets in the clubroom Saturday were won by Fay McKay and Wally Chambers.

The Ladies will hold another flea market on May 12. Their big event this month will be the hosting of the Ladies Auxiliary F4 Zone Convention on April 22. They have this opportunity only once in 13 years, and from previewing their program, they will be hosting this in great style. Registration commences at 11:00 a.m. There will be a parade to the cenotaph led by Sgt.-at-Arms Grenville Draper and the Branch 129 pipe band. Several distinguished guests will attend including federal, provincial, civic and Command representatives.

Gary Barker, D.V.A. representative will attend at the branch on April 24. Please call Lloyd Whitaker for an appointment.

Tickets are selling fast for the Breath of Scotland show on April 30, and the draw for the bicycle exerciser will be made on April 14. Be sure that you have your ticket for this.

Baby week is unofficially celebrated in Wilberforce

WILBERFORCE NEWS

by: WINNIE SCHOFIELD

Let this be known as baby week. An outstanding event is the opportunity to welcome three little newcomers to Wilberforce in one week.

Born at the Peterborough Civic Hospital on March 30 was Julian Alexander, a son for Carol and Rick Forget. He weighed 7 lb. 5 oz. and his proud grandparents are Don and Iona Fevreau of Harcourt Park and Joan and Alec Watt of Toronto. Julian Alexander is the couple's first child.

On April 1 at 5:12 a.m. Lana Cole arrived, weighing 8 lb. 10 oz., at the Peterborough Civic Hospital. Jan and Clarence Cole are the happy parents and grandparents are Neil and Betty McGee of Greenback and Nelson and Violet Cole of Greenwood. Lana is the couple's first child.

Arriving at the Peterborough Civic Hospital on April 5 was a little beauty Nicole J'Nan Watson.

Nicole J'Nan weighed 6 lb. 8 oz. and is the daughter of Katherine and Paul Watson. She is the first grandchild for Marlene and Jackie Watson of Wilberforce and for Betty and Murray Austin of Haliburton.

A busy weekend is coming up. The annual Maple Syrup Festival takes place on Saturday, April 14. The Recreation Centre opens at 9:00 a.m. Pancakes, sausages and maple syrup can be sampled and tables will be set up with a variety of crafts, flea market articles plus baking goods. A dance takes place in the evening with music supplied by a D.J.

At St. Margaret's church a rummage sale will be held on Saturday from 10 to 12 a.m.

On Good Friday there will be a combined service of the United and Pentecostal churches in the Gooderham Community Hall at 11 a.m.

Easter Sunday services will be held at St. Margaret's Anglican Church at 9:15 a.m. Service at the United Church will be at 11:30 a.m. and service at the Wilberforce Full Gospel Church takes place at 11 a.m.

The Monmouth Library will be closed on Good Friday.

Charlie Morris, a World War I Veteran, will have reached the fine age of 100 on April 20 of this year. Charlie Morris and his wife Daisy came to Wilberforce in the early twenties. They purchased a log cabin, built by Art Fleming and lived for many years near that section of the village now owned by George Grant. From here they moved to Pine Drive and later to Toronto. Charlie, who has a number of relatives living in Wilberforce, continued to drive his car until the age of 96. Those of his friends who would like to send a card of congratulations may reach him at this address: Metro Legion Village, Room 210, 59 Lawson Road, West Hill, Ontario M1C 2J1.

The sympathy of the community goes out to the Clark family on the loss of their sister Elaine McDonald. Elaine, who resided in Sudbury, leaves a husband and son. She was the daughter of the late May and Walter Clark. She grew up in Wilberforce and before marriage became a teacher. Her brother Harry is the Monmouth Deputy Reeve and sister Hilda Clark, a retired teacher, operated The House in the Village. Another brother of the family is Gordon Clark who is a frequent visitor to Wilberforce.

If it's Spring...

...Then it must be time to visit the park and feed the ducks. Alison Robertson, 9, and Natascha Toedter, 8, made sure they had plenty of bread last Saturday when they enjoyed Spring along the Gull River. Natascha's been feeding the ducks every time she helps with the laundry, and once almost joined the ducks in the water.

Ideas for Canada Day reunion are being sought

WEST GUILFORD NEWS

by: ELEANOR COOPER

Linda Hebert, president of the Haliburton Figure Skating Carnival, proudly presented the colourful and excellent program at the arena on Sunday. A salute to past presidents included Sylvia Sisson. Those from West Guilford who had been active in former years and took part in instruction or skating were three of Holly and Sylvia Sisson's family: Nadine Campbell, Angela Bilodeau, and Jennifer Wilson. Other skaters from the neighbourhood included Abby Hagerman, Vanessa and Jocelyn Eastmure, Casey Ogle, Jaime Bilodeau, Nicole Cooper, Shannon and Katie McKechnie, Katherine Hagerman, Dawn Hebert, Carrie Sisson and Michelle Simms.

Congratulations to Tammy Moore, daughter of Neil and Betty Moore, for attaining top honours in level four as designated by the Ontario Gymnastics Federation.

Congratulations to Anna Redner (DeMille) on the occasion of her 90th birthday last week.

A bridal shower for Brenda Gibbon was the occasion on Sunday afternoon for a happy Sisson and friends get-together at Leslie and David Chumbley's house. Brenda and Steve Cowie will be married on May 5 at St. George's Church and the community wishes them every happiness.

On April 6, a lovely bridal shower was held for Sharon Packard at the home of her aunt, Elva Heard, of Eagle Lake. Sixteen people were present and Florence Wray of Kirkfield was the guest of honour. Eileen Heard won the prize for games. Sharon received many beautiful gifts and the evening closed with lunch served by the hostess. Sharon and Terry Griffin will be married on April 21, 1990 at Maple Lake United Church. We with them many happy years of married life.

A regular event at the centre now is the movie for families and teenagers on the first Friday of the month at 8 p.m. The next one will be on May 3. It's called "Thief In The Night". There is no admission fee. Betty and Neil Moore are in charge of this event.

Highland Little Theatre held its business meeting at the Centre on April 5. Lorelyn Morgan conducted a brief workshop on improvisation afterwards. Lorelyn, her husband, Barrie Wood and their daughter, Maradyn, are relative newcomers to the area and the community extends a welcome to them, perhaps a little late, but sincere!

If you would like to wish Neilson Owens a happy birthday, please join us at the Centre on April 14, 2-4 p.m.

Elva Cooper's birthday will be celebrated at the Centre on April 28, 2-4 p.m. Please join in wishing her a happy 90th.

Watch for an announcement about a date at the Centre to bring together people and ideas for Canada Day. It's to be a school reunion, so if you ever attended or taught here come to the meeting and see what we can do to make it a day to remember.

UCW holds a Friendship Tea

CARNARVON NEWS

by: ANN McKAY

I am sorry I could not find any one to keep up with the news while I have been away. Daughter Laurie and her son Mark joined Max and I for two weeks in Florida and South Carolina before I went into Kingston General for my heart surgery which I am happy to say is over with. I came home on April 2.

Thanks to all those kind folks for their cards and phone calls and flowers.

Our sympathies to the families of the late Mrs. Agnes Spenceley and George Cowan. I regret being unable to attend their services. They were both held in very high esteem in our village.

Some of the folks back from the sunny south to this dismal weather we are having are Mr. and Mrs. Jim Foster, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Fletcher, Mr. and Mrs. Don Burch and Claire Morrison.

Mr. and Mrs. Stan Archer were in London helping son Clifford celebrate his fiftieth birthday. Happy birthday.

Son Ken and his family were with us on the weekend when we celebrated Max's birthday and our 47th anniversary.

All women of the area are invited to our UCW annual Friendship Tea on April 25 at 2 p.m. Do come out and join us and meet your friends and make new ones and take part in a silent auction. Proceeds to the Hyland Crest Bus Fund.

The combined choirs of Haliburton and Carnarvon churches and friends will honour us with their music on Good Friday morning at 9 a.m. in Carnarvon and 11:15 a.m. at Haliburton United. Everyone is welcome.

COMMUNITY NEWS

Ladies boost bus fund by $905

SENIOR LEAGUE

by: WINNIFRED BARNUM

Our Thursday tea party this week was provided and served by the Maple Lake United Church Women, Ethel Upton, Eileen Barry and Mrs. Dunn. The ladies brought a beautiful birthday cake as well as a delicious lunch. Those having birthdays were Verna Jarvis and Alfred Richardson. Thursday evening we had Nick Fomenko and a new Kinsman Peter Martin to call bingo for us. We had a very nice evening

Of course Friday afternoon was Happy Hour. Lucille Clarke was expected to provide the entertainment. When she was unable to come Bill Payne and Charlie Hadley came (on short notice), Bill with singing and guitar and Charlie played the mandolin. Bill Moore gave them a hand near the finish on the piano. There was a good number out and they were ably served by Ellen and Don Holden and Donna and Jankie.

Friday night Ina McGuire was taken to the Lindsay Hospital as she was very ill. We sincerely hope she has a speedy recovery. Saturday Ina's son reported that his mother had revived enough to talk to them which is encouraging.

Wednesday Ruby Lewis had her sister-in-laws Ruth and Marge to see her.

May Horsley had Nila and Marion to see her and her brother and his wife Don and Marge in the morning.

Sunday evening Chapel service was conducted by Rev. John Burgess and Alice Jones played the organ. The attendance was down due to sickness and some visiting relatives. The service was enlightening for those who attended.

As it was the first Monday in April we held our Residents' Council. We talked over a few problems and Administrator Rheta Jones brought us up to date on what had been accomplished for our betterment under her leadership. The Hyland Crest Auxiliary, by placing jars around Minden, gave the bus fund $732.63 and later $172 more. This is only one of the projects these ladies have accomplished for us.
